Preface

The 1994 Local Elections Handbook marks the beginning of a new stage of development in this series. Our first publication was the 1985 county council election results but that volume covered only the 39 English authorities and ignored the 8 Welsh counties. The following year we published the results of the 36 metropolitan boroughs but ignored those elections for the shire districts and London boroughs not to mention the Scottish regions. It was not until 1988 that we collected and published district council results. By 1989, however, our methods had improved to the extent that we were able to provide a comprehensive study of that year's county elections in both England and Wales. Two years later we undertook to publish the results of the 1991 elections for 333 shire districts as well as 36 metropolitan boroughs. This year we have decided to provide a comprehensive coverage of all local elections held on May 5th. This has meant that for the first time the Local Elections Handbook contains results from Scottish authorities and the 32 London boroughs.

The results from the 9 Scottish regional council elections have been very kindly provided to us by Hugh Bochel and David Denver. It was Hugh's father, John, who along with David Denver began publishing the Scottish local election results in 1974 and have done so ever since. There remains a separate publication, 'The Scottish Regional Elections 1994 : Results and Statistics' published by Bochel and Denver. Although the results for each division are common to both books theirs is a more substantial treatment of the Scottish results than can be given here. In the case of the London boroughs we were, of course, fully aware that these results were collected and published by first the Intelligence Unit of the Greater London Council and, after 1985, by the London Research Centre. The volume covering the most recent elections has been written by Michael Minors and Dennis Grenham and, once again, is far more substantial in its coverage of those particular elections. We should add that in the case of the London results information has been collected entirely independently and some differences will inevitably emerge. We have, for example, as can been seen in the section headed 'Using the Handbook' used a different method for calculating vote shares in multi-member wards.

Our purpose in detailing the Scottish and London results has not been to supplant these specialist publications but rather to provide a complete record of each year's local election results within one volume. It seems appropriate to have produced the first such book just as Scotland and Wales and in England the Isle of Wight at least prepare for the first elections under new local government boundaries in 1995.

The 1994 Local Elections in England and Wales
Colin Rallings & Michael Thrasher

Conservatives had good reason for believing that the 1994 local elections would see an improvement on the previous year's county council results. Then, they had seen their grip on all but one of the counties disappear when over 500 Tory councillors lost their seats. The omens for 1994, however, were different since these particular seats had last been contested in 1990 when the poll tax had provoked deep electoral hostility. Leaving aside the exceptional cases of Westminster and Wandsworth London boroughs, the Conservatives lost seats and councils throughout the country -often recording in individual authorities their lowest ever vote share. Entering the 1994 elections from such a low electoral base held out the promise that in normal circumstances the party might make gains.

But the times proved far from normal and the elections were a Tory disaster. The results established a number of records which party supporters might rather to forget. Their nationally projected share of the vote was a mere 28% - the lowest in the party's history. Over 400 council seats were lost (one in three Conservatives defending a seat were unsuccessful) and a total of 21 councils passed from Tory control. Tory councillors, once the dominant force in local government, now number only a third of all councillors in Great Britain.

The party suffered heavily in the all-out elections for the London boroughs. From having majority control in 12 councils after the 1990 elections, the party now controls just four - Kensington and Chelsea, Bromley, Wandsworth and Westminster. One of their defeats came in Croydon where they lost 10 seats and control of the council for the first time ever to Labour. Those debating the need for electoral reform might care to note that the Conservatives actually polled more votes than Labour in Croydon. Elsewhere the scale of seat transfers was such that sizeable Conservative majorities were overturned in Enfield and Ealing, where Labour took control, as well as in Redbridge, Barnet, Bexley and Harrow which became hung councils. Kingston upon Thames was also lost but here the Liberal Democrats gained from the anti-Conservative swing and now have a slim majority. In this area of London the Democrats now control, in addition to Kingston, the adjacent boroughs of Richmond and Sutton.

Neither Labour nor the Liberal Democrats enjoyed complete success in London with each party losing control of one council. Labour lost Waltham Forest after local Conservatives withdrew from a marginal ward allowing the Liberal Democrats a crucial victory. Media interest in Liberal Democrat controlled Tower Hamlets was guaranteed following a byelection victory for the British National Party (BNP) prior to the May elections. Accusations of racism had been made against some members of the ruling Liberal Democrats and the national party had expelled some of its own councillors. Against this background the elections in Tower Hamlets were keenly fought as evidenced by the high turnout. Labour, with no less than 23 gains, were the beneficiaries of a big swing against the Democrats who saw their own numbers cut considerably The BNP did not enjoy the success feared by many and indeed their sole representative lost his seat. The capital's 32 London boroughs now have 17 Labour administrations, three run by the Liberal Democrats and just four under Conservative control. The remaining eight have no single party with an overall majority.

Outside London voting in the major cities also resulted in a mixed picture. Labour is easily the largest party in terms of vote share and council control in the metropolitan boroughs.. It is difficult for the party to make major advances and indeed it has often more to lose than gain from local elections. In Sheffield, for example, the party lost eight seats as opposition parties focused their campaigns on the city's Labour administration. For the first time the Liberal Democrats in making 11 gains outpolled Labour whose grip on the council was secure because only a third of the seats were up for re-election. Labour's majorities in both Kirklees and Oldham, however, were more vulnerable and net losses of six and three seats respectively proved sufficient. The Liberal Democrats had promised to fight hard in Labour's northern heartlands as part of their strategy of becoming the main party of opposition in these authorities.

The Conservatives' best chance of upsetting Labour lay in the west midlands, principally Birmingham and Dudley councils. The Conservatives made the former a primary target after winning 21 of the city's 39 wards in 1992. As with the rest of their campaign, however, the plan fell apart when Conservative criticisms of policies designed to raise the city's international profile failed to move voters. In fact the party lost seats both here and in Dudley. In Wolverhampton also Labour enjoyed success at the Conservatives' expense winning the two seats they needed to gain majority control of the council. Of the 36 metropolitan boroughs 24 are now controlled by Labour, 11 have no one party in overall control with just Trafford under Conservative rule.

For the Conservatives the electoral gloom of the cities was more than matched in the shires. Control of Tunbridge Wells, long regarded as a bastion of conservatism, was lost when five seats fell on a big swing to the Liberal Democrats. In falling a further 3.5% points compared with the disastrous 1990 elections the Conservative vote in the district mirrored that elsewhere. Liberal Democrat strength in the south was endorsed with the capture of Worthing, Winchester, St. Albans, Rochford, Mole Valley, Colchester, Bath and Eastleigh councils. A parliamentary by-election held in the latter at the beginning of June would reaffirm Liberal Democrat strength in the area. Labour, for their part, managed to gain Welwyn Hatfield from the Conservatives while both Barrow and West Lancashire reverted from being hung councils to Labour majority administrations.

Among the 61 southern shire districts holding elections the Democrats gained no fewer than 120 Conservative seats and no less than 40% of their total gains were recorded in these authorities. This remarkable advance resulted in no less than ten formerly Conservative controlled councils becoming hung, including that touchstone of Conservative party fortunes nationwide, Basildon. The prospects for many Conservative councillors defending their seats in the all-out shire elections scheduled for May next year would appear bleak.

The real scale of the Conservatives' failure in 1994 can be from Table 1. In each of the three types of authority holding elections the Conservative vote share fell in comparison with 1990. The biggest fall came in the London boroughs where a 6% decline was recorded while in the metropolitan and shire areas the decrease was approximately 4%. With just 31.3% of the vote and 27.1% of seats the Conservative party in London posted its worst result since reorganisation in the early 1960s. The main beneficiaries of the Tory collapse were the Liberal Democrats whose performance at the previous elections had been severely hampered both by organisational changes following the collapse of the Alliance and by Labour's dominance as the electoral receptacle for anger with the poll tax. In the shire districts the Liberal Democrat vote rose by 11%, by 8% in London and by 6% in the metropolitan authorities. Moreover, the Democrats are a much more potent electoral force in local elections than the Alliance. Compare, for example, the vote/seat ratios in 1994 with those seen in the 1980s when the Liberal/SDP collaboration was at its height. The Democrats won 327 seats in London in 1994, that is 17% of the total. In the 1982 elections the Alliance parties together won a mere 6% of seats despite polling more than 24% of the vote. In short, the Democrats have seen their volume of seats triple despite a 2% reduction in their share of the popular vote. A more efficient process of targeting seats has allowed the Democrats to play a much bigger part in local government administration than was ever the case when the Alliance was at the height of its popularity.

Although these elections were encouraging for the Liberal Democrats it was Labour's reputation as the main party of local government which received further confirmation. Of the more than four and half thousand seats up for election Labour won 55% albeit with a vote share 10 percentage points lower. In the metropolitan boroughs Labour attracted a majority vote for only the third time in twenty years and while the party could not replicate its spectacular result in the 1971 London elections its vote climbed above 40% for only the fourth time since 1964.

In the months before the May elections we monitored local by-elections to try and detect the likely outcome. Using a model for converting by-election results into a nationally projected vote share for the three main parties our best estimate published in the Sunday Times had less than a 1% margin of error. Despite the accuracy of our vote projection the forecast for seat gains and losses proved wide of the mark. Assuming uniform swing Labour were on course for 50 net gains, Liberal Democrats 250 gains with the Conservatives losing 300 seats overall. In the event, the Liberal Democrats had 136 more gains and the Conservatives 140 more losses than forecast. In Conservative controlled seats the party's share fell by an average of almost 5% more than in other wards. We can only speculate about whether former Conservative voters boycotted these elections or switched allegiance but there are possible long-term consequences for the party of these and other recent elections. The electorate appear increasingly able to discern the marginality of a ward and more importantly the party best able to exploit any anti-government sentiment. Next year's all-out district elections, where thousands of council seats will be contested, could yet prove to be another step on the party's disappearance from British local government.

As Table 3 shows all of London's 758 wards were contested while the rate of contestation in the metropolitan and shire authorities was in line with that of recent elections. Turnout, although down compared with the exceptional elections of 1990, still showed a general improvement. At 46.1%, for example, turnout for the London boroughs was higher than at any previous elections bar 1990 while 42.6% turnout is in line with this particular district council electoral cycle. The one area of concern lies with the metropolitan boroughs. Although turnout rose by some 6% compared with the last occasion these boroughs held elections it is still below the figure recorded in the second half of the 1980s. There is no simple explanation for this apparent decline but factors such as growing inner-city deprivation, a more mobile population as well as Labour's overwhelming dominance in some boroughs all contribute to a picture of local elections short on meaningful competition. The number of women elected increased in the London boroughs (23.9% in 1990) reflecting, perhaps, the growing awareness over the last four years of the need to attract more women to serve in local government. Once again it is in the metropolitan boroughs where women comprise the smallest proportion of candidates and councillors. Despite this women now account for one in four councillors , a record somewhat better than the one in ten for the current House of Commons.

Using The Handbook

Councils are listed in alphabetical order within four separate categories viz., the London boroughs, the metropolitan boroughs, shire districts in England and Wales and finally the Scottish regional councils. Election results have been taken from figures provided by and checked with local Electoral Administrators.

Before the ward results are listed there is a brief section providing aggregate statistics covering the 32 London boroughs, 36 metropolitan boroughs, 118 shire districts and 9 Scottish regional councils. Percentage share is the proportion of the total valid vote polled by each party. In the case of authorities with multi-member wards we have departed from the algorithm used in previous election handbooks for calculating vote shares and have now chosen simply to take the vote of a party's best placed candidate. These are summed to arrive at a figure for total vote and vote shares are then calculated. In the case of Independents we have chosen to group them according to the number of vacancies being contested. Thus, if there are three vacancies and four Independents, as is the case in Merton's Abbey ward, we have grouped the first three Independents together and awarded them one share while the fourth Independent is calculated as a separate vote share. The number of seats contested and the number of seats won by each party is also noted. Turnout, in brackets after the name of the region/district, is the overall turnout in those wards/divisions which had a contested election.

The results for each ward/division are listed in alphabetical order within their authorities. The figure in brackets is the electorate for 1994. The practice adopted by local authorities for calculating this figure varies - in some cases it includes all names on the 1994 register, in others it is a more accurate record of only those entitled to vote on election day in May. It has been impossible to adopt a standard definition of electorate or reliably to identify the particular procedures used by each authority. The appearance of a date in [square brackets] on this line indicates that the election was not held for some reason on May 7th but was contested on the later, specified date. This year there were two such instances, Three Rivers, Bedmond ward and West Oxfordshire, Bartons ward.

Candidates are listed in descending order of vote. The first initial is given; 'Ms' after a candidate's name indicates a woman; and '*' indicates that the candidate was a sitting councillor. Boundary changes in Scotland mean that candidates with an asterisk after their name did not necessarily represent the division in which they stood. Candidates whose names are in bold are those elected. Vote is the number of electors who supported each candidate and Share the proportion of the total number who cast a valid ballot supporting each candidate. Where a candidate was returned unopposed this is noted and figures for vote, share, turnout and majority are recorded as '0.0'. Below the list of candidates, votes and shares is a line of data detailing the result at the corresponding election in 1990, the turnout and the percentage majority. In some cases the result field for 1990 will be blank. This is because some authorities, in addition to those in Scotland, have undergone changes to their ward boundaries within the last four years. Turnout is the proportion of the electorate given for the ward who cast valid ballots. In the case of the multi-member wards in the London boroughs turnout is that given by the local election office and has been calculated knowing the number of valid ballot papers issued. The figure to the right of the turnout represents the lead of the winning candidate over the second placed candidate in percentage terms rounded to one decimal place.
