Preface

This year's Local Elections Handbook continues the policy, introduced in 1994, of publishing the complete set of election results for all types of local authority in Great Britain. In 1995 there were elections for new unitary authorities in Scotland and we are indebted to David Denver, John and Hugh Bochel for making available to us their collection of Scottish results which have been published separately by them as part of their on-going series dating back to the 1970s. Local government has also been reorganised in Wales and results for the new unitary authorities appear in a separate section within the handbook. A partial reorganisation has also taken place in England with four counties abolished (Avon, Cleveland, Humberside and the Isle of Wight) and the two-tier structure in these areas replaced with a system of unitary authorities. Substantial boundary changes were also introduced this year affecting the district councils of Ryedale, Selby and York which were a result of the decision to create a York unitary authority. Results for these new unitary authorities have been included amongst the English shire districts rather than create a separate section. In the section 'Using the Handbook' readers will find a comprehensive listing of these new authorities. With the inclusion of the Scottish results this year's handbook is the largest we have produced. Readers will have noted the price increase but it is our first since 1988 and was necessary to cover our costs.

In past handbooks we have gratefully acknowledged the help and support received from a considerable number of people. Many of those continue to lend their support. Once again, we would like to thank all those working within local authority election offices who responded so positively to our numerous inquiries. This year we were provided with invaluable assistance in Plymouth by Mark Besley and Helen Glanville. Mark supervised the task of collecting and collating election results whilst Helen performed the herculean task of typing in the data. They continued to perform these tasks with unfailing good humour in spite of all the trials and tribulations associated with an enterprise of this size and nature. Further computer processing of the data was carried out by Dr Christine Gunter. Needless to say we would like to charge them with any errors and omissions but unfortunately the convention is that we must bear the ultimate responsibility.

The 1995 Local Elections

The Conservative party hoped that 1995 would see an end to the 'mid-term blues' and that the local elections would mark the beginning of the party's fightback. National opinion polls and the results from local and parliamentary by-elections early in the year showed such hope to be misplaced. Trailing Labour by more than 30% according to some polls, the local elections, scheduled for April in Scotland with England and Wales following a month later, quickly became an exercise in damage limitation. An added problem in 1995 was that this year saw 'all-out' elections for many English shire districts. These seats, numbering in their thousands, had been fought previously in 1991 when Conservative fortunes had been relatively buoyant. Even Conservative Central Office felt that the party could lose about 500 seats and yet still regard the electoral outcome as satisfactory. The party's critics, not to mention independent commentators, speculated that as many as 2000 Conservative councillors, around half of those defending seats, could be defeated.

In last year's handbook we described the Conservative 1994 performance as 'disastrous'. Clearly, we should have reserved that particular adjective for 1995! New local election records were established in 1995, many of which must make painful reading for those closely associated with the Conservative party. First, came the turn of Scotland, where elections took place for 29 new unitary authorities which would shadow the current two tier structure of regions and districts until assuming full powers themselves in 1996. Across the country the Conservative party won only 11% of the vote - less than half that achieved in the 1992 general election and the lowest for the party in living memory. When these new authorities take office none will be under Conservative control. Beforehand, critics had argued that the boundaries of the new Scottish unitary authorities were drawn specifically to facilitate Conservative council control. Favourable boundaries or not the party will have little voice in Scottish local government until the next century.

The second serious blow to Conservative morale came on May 4th in England and Wales. In the event those forecasts at the upper end of Tory losses proved accurate with more than 2000 seats lost along with control of 61 authorities. The party polled a national equivalent vote of just 25% - its worst ever election performance. Interestingly, this low level of electoral support meant the party suffered badly from the vagaries of the 'first-past-the-post' electoral system; one quarter of the vote producing less than one fifth of seats. The Conservative party , once dominant in local government, now has the appearance of a minor party with many fewer councillors than Labour and even trails behind the Liberal Democrats. Across Great Britain a meagre total of 13 councils, responsible for administering local services for less than 4% of the population, are under Tory control.

The scale of the Conservatives' disaster becomes evident from the detail in Table 1. Conservative success in elections for the metropolitan boroughs has been rare of late but with just 20% of the vote the party posted its worst ever result for these authorities. Even in the poll tax elections of 1990 the party captured 26% of the vote and more than a hundred seats. Of greater concern to the party was its showing in the English shires, traditionally the bedrock of Tory support in the country. Previously, the party had never polled below 30% in these authorities but 1995 easily established itself as the Conservatives' nadir. In 1979 when the local elections coincided with the party's first of four consecutive general election victories Conservatives won slightly less than half of all shire district council seats. By 1995, and after sixteen years in power at Westminster, it captured fewer than one in five district council seats. Competition for seats intensified compared with previous rounds of this particular electoral cycle. For the first time Labour contested more wards than the Conservatives with the Liberal Democrats not too far behind. The pattern of party competition helps explain why the Conservatives were able to stay slightly ahead of the Liberal Democrats in terms of the overall vote and in the parties' average share in seats contested . But in terms of actual seats won the Conservatives finished in third place in what would, under normal circumstances, be regarded as the party's area of greatest electoral strength.

Labour dominated the elections in both Scotland and Wales. In contested wards the party obtained roughly half the vote and in both countries a majority of councils and councillors on the new local authorities will be Labour. The remaining parties, Conservative, Liberal Democrat and the respective nationalist parties, SNP and Plaid Cymru, appear engaged in a struggle for second place. In Scotland the SNP appear to have won the battle with more than a quarter of popular support and political control in three of the new unitaries when they assume power next year. Amongst this number was Perthshire and Kinross, some of whose electors returned to the polls in May to oust the Conservative from their hold on the Perth and Kinross parliamentary constituency. In terms of overall vote the Tories shaded the Liberal Democrats for third place in Scotland but if seats are the currency then the positions are reversed. Remarkably, Labour's vote in Wales was virtually identical to that in Scotland, but Plaid Cymru have not the same local electoral base as their counterparts in Scotland winning support among only one in eight voters. Independents are still a significant force in the principality but it should be pointed out that more than a third of seats won by those candidates were unopposed. The Liberal Democrats have pockets of support, win some seats but as yet have still to take political control of a Welsh local authority. Prior to reorganisation the Conservatives had a majority in a single Welsh authority. With these results the party has all but lost its local government presence and in 9 out of 22 authorities it will have no council representation at all.

The political consequences of the 1995 local elections will be felt for some time to come, especially as many of these authorities are elected for a four year period. At a stroke the Conservatives lost control of Trafford, its one remaining metropolitan borough, failed to win any authorities in Scotland and Wales and won majority control in just nine districts holding elections. A number of local authorities, including Bracknell Forest, Bromsgrove, Gedling and Hove, will experience a non-Tory administration for the first time since they were established in the 1970s. Some sixteen councils moved directly from Conservative to Labour control. Amongst this number was Castle Point in Essex which saw the Labour vote rise by 27% as the party captured no fewer than 30 Conservative seats. Four additional former Conservative councils fell under Liberal Democrat control, including Horsham and Mid Sussex, which join a growing number of authorities along the south coast where the party has seen its political influence steadily grow. Another notable performance by the Liberal Democrats took place in Christchurch, scene of a famous parliamentary by-election win in July 1993. Compared with 1991 the Liberal Democrat vote rose by 36% as Conservative, Labour and Independent candidates alike were squeezed by a party that clearly feels it can build support sufficient to defend the constituency at the next general election.

In past local elections Labour has failed to translate opinion poll leads into council seats but that charge cannot be levelled against the party in 1995. Overall, Labour captured more than 1800 new seats and consolidated its lead as the leading party of local government. Throughout Britain Labour now has 11,000 councillors controlling more than 200 local councils. As well as wrestling councils from Tory control Labour also took over twenty authorities which had formerly had hung councils. What should prove of lasting satisfaction to party strategists are signs that Labour has begun to make a successful appeal amongst voters in the south of England. Across the region Labour won more than 600 extra seats, including 100 in Essex and 150 in Kent alone. While the next general election might not be won or lost in those counties Labour's hopes for long-term control at Westminster are dependent upon the party broadening its appeal, particularly amongst southern voters.

Labour's strength poses problems not just for the Conservatives. In the weeks before May 4th the Liberal Democrats, in a bold move, forecast the party would win an additional 500 seats. That forecast was realised but the suspicion remains that the party had forecast low so that anything more could be treated as an unexpected, though welcome, bonus. On some indicators the party is healthy. The number of seats gained matched the record established at the 1991 elections. The party's overall vote rose by 2%. Nationwide it now has political control of more than 50 authorities and approximately 5000 councillors. But the Liberal Democrats' advance has, without question, been checked by Labour. In the south Labour won more seats than the Liberal Democrats who have, in the past, benefited as the main home for Tory protest voting in the region. In some parts of Britain, notably the midlands and north of England, Liberal Democrat councillors were even deposed by Labour. The one English region which did see the Liberal Democrats emerge as the main threat to the Conservatives was the south west. Significant gains were made in Devon, Dorset, Somerset and Wiltshire which should establish the foundations for further Liberal Democrat advances at the next general election.

Faced with widespread losses Conservative politicians fixed upon the lower turnout in these elections to explain away the party's disappointment. Quite simply, it was argued, the party had done badly because Conservative voters had chosen to stay at home. Indeed, as Table 2 shows, turnout was considerably lower than in the equivalent elections four years before. In the English shire districts, for example, turnout fell by about 6% with a similar decline affecting the metropolitan boroughs. In only 8 districts was there a turnout of 50% or more with Hull and Stoke on Trent once again recording the lowest turnouts of just over a quarter of the electorate voting. Of the 36 metropolitan boroughs just two, Oldham and Trafford, could manage average turnouts of more than 40%. Comparisons in both Wales and Scotland are more difficult because these were not only new authorities but the elections themselves were for 'shadow' councils whose term of office would not begin properly for another year. In that sense we might expect some public confusion, particularly in Scotland where elections for the regional councils had only taken place as recently as 1994. That said, average turnout in Scotland was identical to that in 1994. In Wales the drop in turnout was less than 5% if comparison is made with the 1991 district council results. Before leaving the subject of turnout, however, it is worth considering briefly the question of whether the Conservatives suffered because the party's supporters allegedly abstained. Although survey data are better for answering such questions some clues can be gleaned from ward level electoral data. However, in the English shire districts, when we control for the party winning in 1991, the idea that lower turnout damaged the Conservatives is not supported. In fact, turnout declined less in Conservative wards (-5.2% on average) and more in Labour (-7.2) and Liberal Democrat (-8.8%) wards. It cannot be denied that overall fewer electors participated in these elections but it is a debateable point at best whether Conservative prospects were directly harmed as a result.

Fewer people voted but the competition for local council seats intensified. Only 31 out of 827 wards in the metropolitan areas went uncontested, surprising given that the last time Labour had been well ahead of the Conservatives in 1990 more than 50 seats had been won without a fight. In the English shires the level of competition rose still further. In 1991, for example, slightly more than one in eight seats went uncontested but in 1995 this figure had fallen to one in twelve. Wales and Scotland both showed a similar tendency for the number of uncontested wards to decline.

Finally, what of women in local government? The trend of recent years for women to contest and win local council seats continues although the rate of growth appears to have slowed. During the late 1980s and early 1990s there was a surge in the number of women contesting local elections but the year on year increase is now between one and two per cent for both candidates and councillors. Leading the way are the English shires where 28% of candidates and 26% of those elected were women The more urban metropolitan councils attracted fewer women overall. This year saw women contest 24% of seats with 23% of councillors being women. Interestingly, this figure contrasts with London where last year's local elections saw women comprise more than 30% of candidates and 28% of councillors. The Labour party in particular has demonstrated its intention of involving more women in party politics, principally with the use of women-only lists for key parliamentary constituencies. The party's dominance in both Scotland and Wales and the relatively low involvement of women in these local elections suggests that the cause of greater female representation still has some way to go before equality is realised.

USING THE HANDBOOK

The structure of local government has undergone substantial changes since last year and this is reflected in the organisation of this year's local election handbook. In both Scotland and Wales there has been a wholesale reorganisation. The two tier system of regions and districts in Scotland and counties and districts in Wales will be replaced in April 1996 with a system of single-tier or unitary authorities for both countries. Elections for these new shadow authorities took place in April for Scotland and in May for Wales. Under the new arrangements Scotland will have 29 unitary councils with elections in single member wards every four years. In Wales the electoral cycle will be the same for 22 authorities although the number of councillors elected per ward will vary from one to five. Piecemeal structural changes were also announced for parts of the local government system in England. The recommendations of the Local Government Commission that the county councils of Avon, Cleveland and Humberside be abolished and replaced with unitary authorities were accepted by the government. It was also recommended that the Isle of Wight be established as a unitary authority with its two constituent district councils abolished. A final significant boundary change took place around York which saw the area of that authority expanded at the expense of the neighbouring authorities of Selby and Ryedale and a new unitary authority created. A list of the new and old authorities has been supplied at the end of this section. To take account of all these changes, therefore, the organisation of this year's Handbook is as follows. Councils are listed in alphabetical order within four separate categories viz., the metropolitan boroughs; shire districts in England; (including the 14 new unitary authorities); the shadow unitary authorities in Scotland; and the shadow unitary authorities in Wales. Election results have been taken from figures provided by and checked with local Electoral Administrators.

Before the ward by ward results we have provided a section of aggregate data covering the 36 metropolitan boroughs, 288 English shire districts and unitary authorities, 29 Scottish unitary councils and 22 Welsh unitaries. The ward results for each authority have been aggregated to produce a set of summary statistics. These include the percentage vote share for a range of parties. Where wards elect more than one councillor then the vote of the best placed candidate for each party is used in calculating total vote. In the cases of Independent candidates these were grouped according to the number of seats in a ward. In the case of a three-member ward with six Independent candidates, therefore, the votes of the first and fourth placed Independent would contribute towards the total vote figure. The number of seats contested and the number of seats won by each party is also noted. Turnout, in brackets after the name of the county/ district, is the average turnout in those wards which had a contested election. In those authorities where a direct comparison with the 1991 elections has been possible we have also provided the percentage change for the different parties. This figure does not control for varying patterns of party contestation, however, and interested readers should consult the 1991 Local Elections Handbook for such information. Moreover, because of alterations in our method for calculating vote shares in multi-member wards small differences between the data published previously and the change figures in this year's handbook will be inevitable.

The results for each ward/division are listed in alphabetical order within their authorities. The figure in brackets is the electorate for 1995. The practice adopted by local authorities for calculating this figure varies - in some cases it includes all names on the 1995 register, in others it is a more accurate record of only those entitled to vote on election day in May. It has been impossible to adopt a standard definition of electorate or reliably to identify the particular procedures used by each authority. The appearance of a date in [square brackets] on this line indicates that the election was not held for some reason on May 7th but was contested on the later, specified date.

This year there were a number of wards, listed below, where the actual election was held not on the prescribed date but rather on a subsequent date. In each case we have provided a full election result together with the date of the election.

Single-member wards where the election was postponed.

1. North Ayrshire - Stevenston North ward.
2. Oldham - Royton South ward.
3. Powys - Glascwm/Llanelwed ward.
4. Restormel - Trevarna ward.
5. Salisbury - Fovent ward.
6. Sedgefield - Ferryhill ward.
7. South Lanarkshire - Forth ward.
8. Stafford - Weeping Cross ward.
9. Surrey Heath - Parkside ward.
10. West Devon - Milton Ford ward.

Multi-member wards where an insufficient number of candidate nominations were received and the remaining vacancy filled at a subsequent by-election. In these cases we have published details from the original uncontested election only.

1. North Shropshire - Shawbury ward.
2. Oswestry - Sweeney ward.
3. South Derbyshire - Midway ward.

Candidates are listed in descending order of vote. The first initial is given; 'Ms' after a candidate's name indicates a woman; and '*' indicates that the candidate was a sitting councillor. In the cases of Scotland, Wales and the unitary councils in England the creation of new authorities has meant this final piece of information is necessarily absent. Candidates whose names appear in bold are those elected. Vote is the number of electors who supported each candidate and Share the proportion of the total number who cast a valid ballot supporting each candidate. In the case of multi-member wards we have used the vote of each party's best placed candidate in order to calculate total vote. Where a candidate(s) was returned unopposed this is noted and turnout recorded as '0.0'. Below the list of candidates, votes and shares is a line of data detailing the result at the corresponding election in 1991, the turnout and the percentage majority. In some cases the result field for 1991 will be missing because no equivalent election was held. In addition to the new unitary authorities there are some authorities which have undergone minor boundary changes within the last four years and comparison with 1991 is no longer appropriate. Turnout is the proportion of the electorate given for the ward who cast valid ballots. In the overwhelming majority of cases of multi-member wards the turnout is that given by the local election office and has thus been calculated knowing the number of valid ballot papers issued. The figure to the right of the turnout represents the lead of the winning candidate over the second placed candidate in percentage terms rounded to one decimal place.

Candidates who stand for local election use an extensive variety of party labels and we have felt obliged to reduce these to manageable numbers. There were examples of Conservatives who described themselves as 'Local Conservatives' presumably to put distance between themselves and their own national party. Unless the party label included the word 'Independent' we have treated such candidates as if they were official party candidates. It was necessary to bring together a large number of candidates under the general heading of 'Independents' In a few cases there were sufficient of these within a single authority to justify using the label in its own right, an example of which appears in Manchester with a group fighting under the banner of 'Fresh Air Now' (FAN). The descriptions used for party in this year's Handbook are as follows:
