ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This year's Local Elections Handbook is the fifth that has been produced in association with LGC Communications. We are pleased to report that once again, thanks to the generous sponsorship of Local Government Chronicle and the technical advances in desk-top publishing, we are able to hold the price of the Handbook at its 1988 level.

Our usual band of loyal helpers has once more performed valiantly. David Cowling at ITN helped us to gather and collate the 1992 shire district results; Rob Clements provided some crucial statistics; John Mark and Joe Evison provided crucial programming and micro support; and Brian Cheal and Linda Grinstead spent many hours supervising data entry and checking and verifying results.

There appeared to be a slight increase this year in the number of local authorities wishing to make a charge for the provision of information about their election results. Most charges were modest and clearly aimed at recouping postage and reprographic costs. Epping Forest District Council, however, insisted on a fee of £50 before releasing their official results to us. We considered such a charge to be too high for a relatively trivial amount of information which ought to be in the public domain in any event. Epping Forest's results have,therefore, been taken from alternative sources.

Later this year we hope to publish a new book which provides an at-a-glance guide to the electoral history of every local authority in Great Britain since the implementation of the London Government Act 1963 and the Local Government Acts of 1972 (England and Wales) and 1973 (Scotland). Much of the research on which this is based has been funded by the Economic and Social Research Council and publication is being supported by the Arthur McDougall Fund. This book too will be available through LGC Communications.

INTRODUCTION

The 1992 local elections took place just four weeks after the April 9th general election and saw the best performance by the Conservative party since it came to power in 1979. With consummate timing John Major not only delivered a fourth term in office but provided the circumstances in which his party's local government wing was able to begin reversing half a decade of local electoral setbacks. Taking full advantage of both the post-general election honeymoon in public support and election fatigue among the opposition parties, the Tories topped the poll in both shire district and metropolitan borough elections registering more than 200 net gains. More impressive still was their actual share of the vote. In nationally equivalent terms they improved on their general election vote by about 4% to nearly 47%, whereas Labour's share was down 3% to 32% and the Liberal Democrats remained stuck in the 18-19% band. However, a low-key and lacklustre campaign and the recent election of a government with a new mandate, including a commitment to the replacement of the 'poll tax' by the 'council tax', resulted in an exceptionally low turnout. In some authorities scarcely one in five electors bothered to vote and whilst this may be understandable, it was hardly the outcome local government itself can have wanted as its functions and democratic base again come under scrutiny.

Metropolitan Borough Elections, 1992

The Conservative successes in 1992 were perhaps particularly important in the metropolitan boroughs. A long series of poor local election results had led to the party's virtual extinction in many northern cities, but although there are now no Conservative councillors in South Tyneside and only one or two in places like Barnsley, Gateshead, Liverpool and Wigan, the gains this year have allowed it to re-establish a credible presence in other areas. A similar performance in 1994, for example, would threaten the Labour hegemony in Birmingham and put many currently 'hung' councils within reach.

Not surprisingly Labour argued that this year's local election results were hopelessly skewed by the poor turnouts in their own strongholds. Certainly the overall turnout in the metropolitan authorities was, at 32.5%, worse than for many years. However, the league table for 1992 looks very similar to previous years with Bury, Stockport and Wolverhampton heading the list and Rotherham, Sunderland and Wigan bringing up the rear. Only 8 wards had turnouts above 50% with South Marple, Stockport coming top of the tree with 52.9%; whereas 62 wards, propped up by the 14.1% recorded by Langworthy, Salford, had turnouts of less than 20%. It does seem true that many traditional Labour supporters stayed at home, but the Tories have to be credited with polling over 70,000 more votes than they did in 1990 when turnout was nearly 14% higher. Many of these votes will have come from an above average turnout among loyalists celebrating the victory on April 9th, but it is likely too that those Conservative 'incliners' who can usually find something to protest about at mid-term elections will this time simply have replicated their general election vote. Whether or not they stray during the current parliament will depend heavily on the successful implementation of the 'council tax'.

Although turnout was low, party competition in the metropolitan boroughs was keener than for many years. Only 12 wards were uncontested; three-way contests approached the level found during the heyday of the Alliance; and there were record numbers of candidates, women candidates and women elected. Such figures present an electorally healthy picture and suggest that parties do not find persuading members to stand for election an insuperable problem even where they know they have little chance of winning.

* Read across for the number of wards won by a party in 1988: down for those it won in 1992. For example, the Conservatives gained 9 wards in 1992 that had been won by the Liberal Democrats in 1988; in contrast they lost 4 wards to the LibDems which they themselves had won in 1988.

Poor turnout or not Labour should not be complacent about their reversals this year. It was the electoral system that allowed them to win more than half the wards with less than 40% of the vote, and their credibility as rulers will have taken a knock on those councils which they control but where they were clearly the minority party in May. That they did so poorly in the West Midlands was something of a surprise so soon after their general election gains in the region, but in fact the result in May reinforced a long period of local government decline there. Labour lost a total of 40 seats to the Conservatives, who took 51% of the vote in the region as a whole -fully 10% up on 1991. Labour must also brace itself for likely further losses in 1994, when it will be defending the spectacular gains it made at the 'poll tax' election of 1990. The party's share of the vote this year, 39.3%, looks rather sick against the 54.8% it achieved in 1990.

The Liberal Democrats' modest figure of net gains allowed them to recoup the ground lost in 1988 when the local elections were fought just weeks after the acrimonious merger between the greater parts of the Liberal and Social Democrat parties. However, they were successful in gaining over 30% of the vote in just four authorities -Liverpool, Oldham, Rochdale and Stockport- and failed to follow their usual practice of doing noticeably better at the local rather than the general election level. Their strategy of playing to their strengths is the right one; it just seems that they are able to mount a challenge in fewer and fewer metropolitan areas.

English and Welsh District Elections, 1992

The minority of district councils which hold elections by thirds tend to be concentrated in the more urban areas of England and Wales. As a result fewer seats are uncontested and fewer Independents get elected than is the case in those authorities where the voters have an opportunity to go to the polls only once in every four years. In May 1992 nearly 95% of successful candidates stood for one of the three major parties or for Plaid Cmryu and only 7% of wards saw no contest. By contrast in May 1991 non-major party candidates won 19% of seats throughout England and Wales and voters in 15% of wards had a councillor elected unopposed.

A further consequence, which has some relevance for current debates, is that turnouts tend to be lower in those authorities with annual elections than in those whose councils are elected all at once. Such a proposition was demonstrably proven in 1991, and in 1992 it is hard to believe that average turnout would have sunk as low as 37.8% if it had been an all-out election year. Somehow the atmosphere of post-general election lethargy would have been harder to sustain if the very existence of party majorities in the town hall had been at stake. Nevertheless there were the usual variations between the high and low performers. Nowhere was turnout above 50%, but Bath topped the list closely followed by Tandridge and Basildon. At the other end of the scale, Kingston upon Hull took its customary wooden spoon with a woeful figure of 21.1% and four other districts had turnouts below 30%, including such familiar offenders as Hartlepool and Stoke on Trent. At ward level the highest turnout was at Droxford, Soberton and Hambledon in Winchester with 64.7% and the lowest at Noddle Hill, Hull with 10.7%. There was also the habitually low turnout in the Queens ward in Rushmoor (12.3%), but most electors here are from the Aldershot garrison and simply not present to vote.

Following two sets of local elections where they had to concede first place in the shire districts to Labour, the Conservatives hit back with a vengeance in 1992. Their vote was up by 4.4% compared with 1988 and by a massive 14.4% compared with the 1990 'poll tax' contest. It was almost commonplace for them to poll over 50% of the vote in individual districts, and the Prime Minister's home territory of Huntingdonshire was supplanted from its traditional position as most Tory district by both Broxbourne and the increasingly folkloric Basildon. Although they gained few extra district councils outright, more than 100 net gains leave them well-placed to take advantage of likely further Labour losses in 1994. In many places the Conservatives polled better than at the general election and the new Governor of Hong Kong, Chris Patten, will have permitted himself a wry smile that his party topped the poll in local elections for a Bath district council coterminous with his former constituency. In line with their relative success in the metropolitan boroughs some of the Tories' best results came in urban areas. They gained 8 seats from Labour in Basildon and Brighton; 5 each in Bristol and Thamesdown (Swindon); and 10 in Stoke on Trent.

For Labour the contrast with their triumph in the same set of elections in 1990 cannot have been more stark. Their share of the vote slumped from 44% to 29.5% and they came first in fewer than one in three wards. Even compared to when these particular seats were last fought in 1988 there is little comfort for Labour. They lost votes over the intervening four years to both the Conservatives and the Liberal Democrats and suffered a net loss of seats to both other parties. Welwyn Hatfield, which they had formerly controlled, went straight over to the Conservatives and they lost overall control in Cambridge, Milton Keynes and Wyre Forest. Local election success during the 1987-92 parliamentary term thus proved to be as much of an illusion for Labour as their prolonged lead in the opinion polls.

	1987	1988	1990	1991	1992
Conservative	40.2	40.2	30.2	35.4	44.6
Labour	29.5	36.1	43.8	35.8	29.5
Alliance/LD	27.6	18.5	18.5	23.3	21.1

Such volatility is nothing new, but the party will also be disturbed by one other aspect of this year's local results. For some time it has seemed to be the case that Labour (and, indeed, the Liberal Democrats) polls better in local than in general elections. Theories to account for this have been widely discussed , and there has been agreement that for some electors voting for a service providing local authority has not seemed inconsistent with at the same time supporting an avowedly tax cutting government. In 1992 the picture was nothing like as clear cut. On the one hand, based on the local results, Labour would have 'won' two constituencies it failed to gain on April 9th, Slough and Swindon. On the other hand, in most places there was a further swing to the Conservatives compared with the general election making gains like Ipswich and Southampton Itchen vulnerable. Nothing in the May 7th results could be said to have given Labour a basis for recovery.

The Liberal Democrats expressed themselves content with their 39 net gains in the shire districts, but in truth this was some way below their performance in the recent past. Competing in those seats which they had last had to fight in the tense days following the merger in 1988, they did little better than recoup the losses they had sustained then. Contesting more wards than in 1988 their share of the total vote was up, but their average share in just those seats they fought was fractionally down. This suggests that while they continue to poll well in some districts like Adur, Eastbourne and Harrogate where they are well-established, they are currently finding it difficult to extend their appeal. The Liberal Democrats more than any other party rely on local election success to keep themselves in the public eye. This year they failed to fire either the campaign or the results.

But the problems of Labour and the Liberal Democrats pale into insignificance compared with those of the Greens. They contested scarcely half the number of seats they had in 1990, but despite that saw their share of the vote in seats fought slump from 8.9% to 4.9%. They won a single seat and passed a notional 5% electoral threshold in only Oxford and Stroud. As plenty of others could tell them, the electorate tends to steer clear of divided parties.

In about 10% of cases there were no equivalent elections in 1988 owing to the subsequent re-drawing of ward boundaries and they are therefore excluded from the table.

USING THE DIGEST

Local authorities are listed in alphabetical order within two separate categories -Metropolitan Boroughs; and English and Welsh Districts. An index is provided at the rear of the Handbook with.a record of the political composition of each council having elections in May 1992. All election results are taken from figures provided by and checked with local Electoral Administrators. In some cases these differ from Press Association data, especially, for example, where candidates who specifically stood as 'Liberal' or as 'Independent" have been added by PA to the Liberal Democrat or Conservative totals for the authority.

At the beginning of each section there is some summary information about the elections in each council. Percentage share is the proportion of the total valid vote polled by each party. The number of seats contested and the number of seats won by each party is also noted. In authorities which hold annual elections this latter figure will not, of course, correspond with the council composition data. Turnout is the average turnout in those wards which had a contested election.

The results for each ward are listed in alphabetical order within districts. The figure in brackets is the electorate for 1992. The practice adopted by local authorities for calculating this figure varies -in some cases it includes all names on the 1992 register, in others it is a more accurate record of only those entitled to vote on election day in May. It has been impossible to adopt a standard definition of electorate or reliably to identify the particular procedures used by each authority.

A @ next to a ward name indicates that more than one seat was contested at the 1992 election. The figure following specifies the number of vacancies. The appearance of a date in [square brackets] on this line indicates that the election was not held for some reason on May 7th but was contested on the later, specified date.

Candidates are listed in descending order of vote. The first initial is given; 'Ms' after a candidate's name indicates a woman; and '*' indicates that the candidate was a sitting councillor. It proved impossible to obtain all this information for some districts. Where no women candidates or incumbent councillors at all are listed for an entire local authority, it may be assumed that the data are missing. The candidates whose names are in bold are those elected.

The abbreviations used for party are relatively straightforward:

CON: Conservative
LAB: Labour
LD: Liberal Democrat
SD: Social Democrat
IND: Independent
GREEN: Green
PC: Plaid Cymru

IND CON: Indep. Conservative
IND LAB: Independent Labour
IND LD: Independent Liberal Democrat
IND SD: Independent SD

IND GREEN: Independent Green
IND PC: Independent PC

APT: Anti-Poll Tax
ANP: All Night Party
BNP: British National Party

RES: Resident (Assoc)
RLGG: Raving Loony Green Giant
SOC: Socialist

N.B. Some individual candidates who did not specify a party affiliation have been coded as IND.

Vote is the number of electors who supported each candidate and Share the proportion of the total number who cast a valid ballot supporting each candidate. Where a candidate was returned unopposed this is noted under 'vote' as either Unopp or 0.0. Turnout is the proportion of the electorate given for the ward who cast valid ballots. The figure to the right of the turnout represents the lead of the winning candidate over the second placed candidate in percentage terms rounded to one decimal place. The party topping the poll in the same ward in 1988 is listed. If no party is listed this is because the ward boundaries have been altered since 1988.

In the case of wards with multiple vacancies a number of different procedures have been adopted regarding the calculation of turnout and share of the vote. Where accurate figures were not available on the number of ballot papers issued, we have had to prepare an estimate of turnout. In calculating share of the vote and turnout we have taken our method from that used by Curtice et al in Electoral Studies 2.1 1983. We define averages as follows:

Where each of the three major parties fields as many candidates as there are vacancies, we simply average the votes cast for each party's candidates.
Where one or more of the major parties fields less than a full slate, we note the size of the smallest slate ('n') and average each party's 'n' best votes.
'Independent' and 'Other' candidates are always counted individually in terms of share of the vote. However, where there are a large number of non-party candidates and no official information on turnout is available, we have assumed the number of electors to be the total number of votes cast divided by the number of vacancies. The accuracy of our calculated data in some rural wards may have been affected by these necessary transformations.
