Introduction

The 1998 local elections saw record low turnouts in many authorities, prompting renewed discussion over the lack of public interest in local government. It would be premature to conclude from one set of results that local democracy is facing a crisis but when, in some areas, fewer than one in five electors vote, alarm bells should certainly ring. The government's White Paper, 'Modern Local Government : In Touch with the People', acknowledges the problem of low turnout and proposes a range of possible solutions. These include the election of mayors and the proposal to introduce, where practical, a system of annual elections involving a third of councillors each year. It is thought that such measures would make local government more visible, as well as improve democratic accountability. Whether electors will be more inclined to vote, simply because of more frequent elections, is debatable. An important dimension of accountability is the power of voters to oust an unpopular local authority. As this year's elections showed, regardless of how badly the Labour party did in some authorities, its council majority was not in jeopardy since only a fraction of seats were at stake. Of course, the proposal for annual elections might not survive the legislative process. The report of the Jenkins commission on electoral reform will muddy the waters. Whatever is decided on that front will, inevitably, affect local electoral reform. Already, the position of local government appears anomalous, with next year's elections to Scottish, Welsh and European assemblies all to be decided by some form of Proportional Representation.

Altering the local electoral system will not be without its difficulties. Introducing annual elections will have consequences for the re-drawing of local ward boundaries given the need to create three-member wards. That process will take considerable time to implement. Abolishing the current electoral system in favour of another would also be time-consuming. The government has, however, expressed its desire for a review of some out-dated electoral practices. Elections could be held on a Sunday, the number of electors able to vote by post should be increased substantially, and, to encourage higher turnout, polling stations could be sited in more convenient locations, such as supermarkets. In the short-term such changes could reawaken public interest in local elections but longer-term solutions to voter apathy are required.

Results

There were elections in 166 local authorities on May 7th. In London there were whole council elections for 32 London boroughs as well as a referendum on the question of establishing an elected mayor and 25 member London-wide assembly. Additionally, there were partial council elections in the 36 metropolitan boroughs, for 88 district councils and for 9 unitary authorities. One unitary authority, the Isle of Wight, had an election for the entire council. In the majority of cases these particular seats had last been contested in 1994 but a minority, located in the unitary councils, had last been fought in either 1995 or 1996. More than 4,300 seats were at stake.

Despite its high standing in the opinion polls Labour's vote fell, compared with both the last general election and, more importantly from the viewpoint of losing seats, the 1994 elections. The Liberal Democrat vote also declined from its 1994 base. Conservative candidates benefited from the reduced popularity of the other two parties, but not quite as much as the party might have hoped. Overall, the Conservatives made net gains of more than 260 seats, with Labour incurring a net loss of some 150 seats and the Liberal Democrats losing 116. Those seats transfers were sufficient to move the Conservative party ahead of the Liberal Democrats in terms of overall councillor numbers (4,770 versus 4,630) but both parties lie far behind Labour's total of more than 10,000 councillors across Great Britain. The Liberal Democrats, however, still control more local authorities than do the Conservatives.

Table 1 gives an overall summary of the results as well as showing how the parties fared in the different types of local authorities. More than 13,000 candidates fought these elections, approximately three candidates for each vacancy. In London and the metropolitan boroughs the Labour party contested every seat with the Conservatives not far behind. Although the Liberal Democrats were more selective over which wards to fight the party still managed to contest approximately 80% of vacancies in London, the metropolitan boroughs and the shire districts. In the areas covered by unitary councils Liberal Democrat candidates actually outnumbered those from the two main parties.

For all of the parties the results saw some successes and failures. Labour, which might have expected to lose control of councils as the incumbent party of government, actually finished with a net gain of one. Although the London boroughs of Hillingdon and Islington were lost, along with the districts of Cambridge and Stroud, the party gained Brent, Harrow, Hastings, Lambeth, and Waltham Forest. The Conservatives, continuing the party's poor showing across London at the last general election, failed to make progress at the local government level. Indeed, the gain of Bexley was cancelled out with the loss of Bromley. Elsewhere, the party regained control in Runnymede and Tunbridge Wells. Council losses had been expected by the Liberal Democrats and although these were held to just nine they included such authorities as Kingston, Isle of Wight and Colchester where the party had captured the parliamentary seat only a year before.

Beneath the headlines, however, a fascinating picture of contrasting party fortunes could be found. Labour's victories in Brent and Lambeth were built on a 7% swing in its favour. Labour's loss in Hillingdon stemmed from the same level of swing running in the opposite direction. In Islington, the Liberal Democrats took half the seats and drew level with Labour, but in Harrow the party went from first to third place in terms of vote share. Outside London there were similar tales of parties doing better or worse than might have been expected from the general pattern of voting. Hastings, controlled by the Liberal Democrats fell to Labour. Liverpool, until very recently controlled by Labour fell to the Liberal Democrats - the party's first council majority in a metropolitan borough. Local effects could be seen in Doncaster where controversy surrounding the conduct of some Labour councillors contributed to a drop of 30% in the party's vote compared with just 6% across the metropolitan boroughs as a whole. Defenders of local democracy will take comfort from evidence which shows that electors are casting votes based on local, not national issues.

Interestingly, the fall in turnout in Doncaster was less dramatic than in other authorities, reflecting, perhaps, that where local issues do become salient electors pay more attention to the contest. But the general picture for turnout was depressing (see Table 4). Even in London, where it was felt that the referendum might stimulate electoral interest, little over a third of electors bothered to vote. Since 1978 turnout in London has consistently been above 40%, rising to 48% in the poll tax election of 1990. In the metropolitan boroughs less than one in four electors voted, a figure which eclipsed the previous low for these authorities recorded as recently as 1996. Just a decade ago turnout was 40% or more for these councils. In Barnsley, Knowsley, Rotherham, Salford, Sunderland and Wigan turnout was 20% or below. The picture was little better in the district and unitary authorities, and here too there were some very low turnouts, including Hull where just 18% of electors voted.

In other respects the elections showed local government in a good light. A total of 38 vacancies (less than 1% of all seats) saw candidates returned unopposed. A clear majority of those electors that did cast a ballot would have faced a choice of candidates from the three main parties. A significant number would also have been offered the choice of a Green party candidate as well as a myriad of other minor parties. The proportion of women candidates was surprisingly uniform across the four types of local authority. A breakdown of women candidates by party also shows little variation. Amongst Conservative and Labour candidates women comprised 29% of the total, a figure bettered slightly by the Liberal Democrats (33%) and the Greens (37%). The number of women elected to serve on local authorities continues to rise.

Using the Handbook

In 1998 there were elections for the 32 London boroughs, 36 metropolitan boroughs, 10 unitary councils and 88 shire district councils. This year's Handbook is organised into sections which cover the results for each of these four types of local authority. Election results have generally been taken from figures provided by, and checked with, Electoral Administrators.

Before the ward by ward results we have provided a section of aggregate data covering the four types of local authority. The ward results for each authority have been aggregated to produce a set of summary statistics. These include the percentage vote share for a range of parties. Where wards elect more than one councillor then the vote of the best placed candidate for each party is used in calculating total vote. In the cases of Independent candidates these were grouped according to the number of seats in a ward. In the case of a three-member ward with six Independent candidates, therefore, the votes of the first and fourth placed Independent would contribute towards the total vote figure. The number of seats contested and the number of seats won by each party is also noted. Turnout, in brackets after the name of the authority, is the average turnout in those wards which had a contested election. In those authorities where a direct comparison with the 1994 elections has been possible we have also provided the percentage change for the different parties. The 10 unitary councils have a different base year to the other local authorities, in some cases the last time these particular seats were fought was in 1995, in others the relevant contests were in 1996. Furthermore, because the different sets of elections were not directly comparable we have not included any change figures for these particular authorities. In those cases where comparisons have been made between a party's vote in 1994 and in 1998 we have not controlled for varying patterns of party competition. Interested readers should consult the 1994 Handbook for such information.

The results for each ward are listed in alphabetical order within their authorities. The figure in brackets is the electorate for 1998. The practice adopted by local authorities for calculating this figure varies - in some cases it includes all names on the 1998 register, in others it is a more accurate record of only those entitled to vote on election day in May. It has been impossible to adopt a standard definition of electorate or reliably to identify the particular procedures used by each authority. The appearance of a date in [square brackets] on this line indicates that the election was not held for some reason on May 7 but was contested on the later, specified date. This year there were three such instances, Ealing, Springfield; Bexley, Blendon & Penhill; Wakefield, Wakefield Central.

Candidates are listed in descending order of vote. The first initial is given; 'Ms.' after a candidate's name indicates a woman; and '*' indicates that the candidate was a sitting councillor, although not necessarily for the ward fought in 1998. Vote is the number of electors who supported each candidate and Share the proportion of the total number who cast a valid ballot supporting each candidate. In the case of multi-member wards where more than one vacancy was filled we have used the vote of each party's best placed candidate in order to calculate total vote and hence party shares. Where a candidate(s) was returned unopposed this is noted and turnout recorded as '0.0'. Below the list of candidates is a further line of data. First, the name of the party whose candidate finished top of the poll at the corresponding election in 1994 (or 1995/1996 for wards in the unitary councils). In multi-member wards it is important not to assume that the named party won all available seats in that ward. Next, is recorded the percentage turnout. Turnout is the proportion of the electorate who cast valid ballots at the election. In the overwhelming majority of cases turnout is that given by the Electoral Administrator and has thus been calculated knowing the number of valid ballot papers issued. In the remaining cases we have ourselves calculated turnout from the available information. The figure to the right of the turnout represents the lead of the winning party over the second placed party in percentage terms rounded to one decimal place.

Candidates who stand for local election use an extensive variety of party labels and we have felt obliged to reduce these to manageable numbers. Unless the party label included the word 'Independent' we have treated such candidates as if they were official party candidates. It was necessary to bring together a large number of candidates under the general heading of 'Independents'. The descriptions used for party in this year's Handbook are as follows:
