Introduction

The 1999 local elections saw contests in 362 councils across most of England and the whole of both Scotland and Wales. In 241 of these authorities, voters were electing the entire council membership. With more than 13,300 council seats at stake the elections provided a crucial test of the parties' standing at both the local and national levels. A total of 33,842 candidates contested the elections. In the majority of cases these seats were last fought in 1995 when the Conservatives were particularly unpopular with the electorate. The party suffered one of its worst ever defeats, polling approximately 25 per cent of the national equivalent vote and losing more than 2,000 seats. Labour was the principal beneficiary, capturing an extra 1,800 seats with 47 per cent share of the vote. The Liberal Democrats, in making 500 gains in 1995 emerged with political control of 51 councils; four times the number of Conservative administrations.

Boundary changes affected a considerable proportion of local authorities. All local authorities in Scotland had revised ward boundaries, over half of those in Wales, and more than 50 district and unitary councils in England.. In most cases, however, it proved possible to estimate the distribution of seats for the main parties on the new boundaries. Both Labour and Conservative strategists too tried to prepare the ground for expected gains or losses. Labour's pre-election 'spin' began as early as autumn 1998 when an internal report was 'leaked' to the press. This spoke of losses reaching 2000 seats. The Conservatives' own analysis stated that it would struggle to make 500 gains. In both cases the scale of gains/losses was designed such that the outcome was either not as bad as expected (Labour) or better than had been anticipated (Conservatives). In the months prior to the elections Labour enjoyed a large opinion poll lead over the Conservatives of some 30 percentage points.

Local by-election results, however, told a different story. Conservative candidates were capturing seats from both Labour and Liberal Democrats. Translating these results into national vote share figures suggested that Labour's lead was of the order of just two percentage points. The narrowness of that lead, together with the relative position of the two parties in 1995, meant that the Conservatives could make in the region of 1400 seat gains. As with other recent contests, by-election results proved to be a more reliable indicator of the state of local electoral opinion. Indeed, our estimate of the national equivalent vote following these elections places Labour on 36 per cent, Conservatives 34 per cent and Liberal Democrats 25 per cent.

Table 1 provides an overview of the results as well as summarising the position for the different types of local authorities holding elections this year. As well as recording the votes and percentage share for the main parties it also makes a distinction between the number of wards contested/won and the number of seats contested/won by each party. In the case of Scotland, where all electoral wards are single member, these columns are replicated, but elsewhere it is important to recognise that many wards are multi-member. Labour emerged as the largest party both in terms of vote and seat share and contested more wards and seats than any other party. The Conservatives' best performance came in the elections for the English shire districts where the party obtained 36.5 per cent of both votes and seats. In the metropolitan boroughs, where direct comparisons between this year and last can be made, the Conservative vote share fell slightly but the party's share of seats improved.

The Liberal Democrats' electoral campaign strategy of targeting Labour seats has become more evident. The party won an additional 20 seats and even threatened to replace the Conservatives as the second party of choice in the metropolitan authorities. Across the English shires the Liberal Democrats fared less well, but even in these adverse conditions its vote held up reasonably well. Significantly, for a third party, the Liberal Democrat vote and seat shares remain comparable. The Greens too had a good election. The party won 25 seats overall and began to establish some new areas of strength, including five seats gained in Lancaster.

The local elections in both Scotland and Wales were held simultaneously with the contests for the new national legislatures. The Conservative party improved slightly on its 1995 position but remains fourth in Scotland in terms of council representation. Labour continues to be dominant but its vote share is lower by eight percentage points compared with four years ago. There was an identical fall in its share of seats. The Scottish National party continues to advance, contesting more seats than any other. By fielding as many candidates as possible, however, the SNP suffers from the operation of the 'first past the post' electoral system. The gap between the party's vote and seat shares remains virtually identical to what it was in 1995. In Wales, Plaid Cymru doubled its share of seats and put some distance between its rivals in the race to rein in Labour's lead. The Independent vote remains strong, despite the challenges produced by greater party politicisation.

The Conservatives made 1437 net gains compared with net losses for Labour and Liberal Democrats of 1346 and 118 respectively (see Table 2). It is interesting to examine the geography of seat transfers. More than half of Conservative gains came in southern England while the North, Scotland and Wales could only contribute less than 20 per cent of the party's gains. That pattern of voting suggests that although the Conservative party has recovered in its traditional heartland it is not yet able to mount an attack on Labour's core territory. As expected, Labour did not suffer its feared meltdown and despite these losses the party leads local government, both in terms of seats and councils controlled.

The variability in the Liberal Democrat performance merits further comment. In the southern English shires Liberal Democrat candidates captured Conservative seats during the first half of the decade but in 1999 many of those seats, though by no means all, were restored to Tory colours. Following the general election the Liberal Democrats have evolved a new electoral strategy. Labour councillors, particularly in northern cities such as Liverpool and Sheffield, finds themselves the target of Liberal Democrats' local campaigning tactics. This is borne out by the figures. In the South, the party lost 313 seats, mostly to the Conservatives. Losses were also sustained in the Midlands but these were counter-balanced by gains from Labour. In the North, where Labour is dominant, the Liberal Democrats appear to have been the beneficiary of protest voting and made net gains of 140 seats. Given that the two parties are working closer together on a range of policy issues nationally, the extent of this local electoral competition could create interesting tensions.

With such a large number of authorities having whole council elections it was likely that a number would see changes in political control. Table 3 shows that the Conservative party gained control of an additional 48 councils. Of this total, nine were captured directly from Labour, seven from the Liberal Democrats but the majority of gains came in authorities where formerly no single party had been in overall control. Labour suffered a net loss of 32 councils. These included two authorities in Wales, Caerphilly and Rhondda, Cynon Taff as well as its highly publicised defeat in Sheffield where the Liberal Democrats captured control.

The Liberal Democrats took majority control in Stockport while the party strengthened its grip in Liverpool. With further elections due next year throughout the metropolitan boroughs there will be fresh opportunities for the Liberal Democrats to threaten Labour's majorities. In fact, in 1999 only 19 councils saw administrative control switch between parties; the bulk moving either into or out of no overall control. So-called 'hung' councils continue to comprise a significant proportion of all local authorities in Britain.

Turnout in this year's set of local elections rose slightly on last year but the underlying trend may still be downwards. In the metropolitan boroughs, where fewer than one in four voted in 1998, average turnout recovered to 26 per cent. Structural changes to English local government prevent direct comparison with the pattern in 1995 but turnout does appear to have fallen by six or seven percentage points. Where once many authorities could boast turnouts in excess of 40 per cent less than 50 English local authorities reached that level in 1999. In both Scotland and Wales, of course, local electoral turnout was boosted because of the Parliament and Assembly elections respectively.

Competition for seats remains highest in the more urbanised metropolitan boroughs and the single-tier English unitary authorities. The pattern across the English shires is mixed but again the urban/rural dimension remains an important factor in determining whether the election is contested or not. Overall, there were 2.5 candidates for each vacant seat. Similarly, the degree of party politicisation also reflects an urban bias with many more seats in cities offering electors the range of choice that they might expect at a general election. Women continue to occupy approximately one in every four council seats across Britain. In the metropolitan boroughs exactly the same proportion of women were successfully elected as last year and in the English shires and Scottish unitary authorities the figures were identical to those in 1995. Only in Wales was there a small decline in the proportion of women elected to serve as local councillors.

Using the Handbook

In 1999 there were elections for a total of 362 local authorities throughout Great Britain. In England, contests were held in the 36 metropolitan boroughs, 35 unitary councils, and 237 shire district councils. Additionally, all 32 unitary councils in Scotland, as well as 22 councils in Wales, were re-elected. This year's Handbook is organised into sections which cover the results for each of these five types of local authority. Election results have generally been taken from figures provided by, and checked with, Electoral Administrators.

Before the ward by ward results we have provided a section containing aggregate data covering each local authority. The ward results for each authority have been aggregated to produce a set of summary statistics. These include the percentage vote share for a range of parties, including in Scotland and Wales that for the Nationalist parties. Where wards elect more than one councillor then the vote of the best placed candidate for each party is used in calculating total vote. In the cases of Independent candidates these were grouped according to the number of seats in a ward. In the case of a three-member ward with six Independent candidates, therefore, the votes of the first and fourth placed Independent would contribute towards the total vote figure. The number of seats contested and the number of seats won by each party is also noted.

Turnout, in brackets after the name of the authority, is the average turnout in those wards which had a contested election. The Appendix contains details of local authority turnout that has been calculated in a different manner. Instead of taking the average value in contested seats we have summed the votes and electorates in contested wards and then expressed one as a percentage of the other. These two methods for calculating local authority level turnout will produce different figures for those authorities that have a large range for ward level electorates.

In those authorities where a direct comparison with the 1995 elections has been possible we have also provided the percentage change for the different parties. The 35 unitary councils have a range of base years. Only in the 13 cases where the base year for comparison is 1995 have we provided data on party change. In those cases where comparisons have been made between a party's vote in 1999 and an earlier election we have not controlled for varying patterns of party competition. Interested readers should consult the relevant year's Handbook for such information.

The results for each ward are listed in alphabetical order within each local authority. The figure in brackets is the electorate for 1999. The practice adopted by local authorities for calculating this figure varies - in some cases it includes all names on the electoral register as originally published, in others it is a more accurate record of only those entitled to vote on election day in May. It has been impossible to adopt a standard definition of electorate or reliably to identify the particular procedures used by each authority. The appearance of a date in [square brackets] on this line indicates that the election was not held for some reason on May 6 but was contested on the later, specified date. This year there were a number of such instances which are listed below:

Allerdale, Moorclose;	Dacorum, Highfield & St. Pauls;
East Hampshire, The Hangers;	East Lindsey, Ludford;
Fenland, Manea;	Kings Lynn & West Norfolk, Lynn Central;
Penwith, St. Ives North;	Powys, Gwernyfed;
Rochdale, Milnrow;	Surrey Heath, West End;
West Dorset, Broadwindsor;	Welwyn Hatfield, Hollybush;
Wyre, Warren.

The result for the Selby Central ward in Selby district is the amended one following an undercount on 06/05/99 and a subsequent appeal to the High Court.

Candidates are listed in descending order of vote within each ward. The first initial is given; 'Ms.' after a candidate's name indicates a woman; and '*' indicates that the candidate was a sitting councillor, although not necessarily for the ward fought in 1999. Vote is the number of electors who supported each candidate and Share the proportion of the total number who cast a valid ballot supporting each candidate. Because of rounding shares do not necessarily sum to 100.

In the case of multi-member wards where more than one vacancy was filled we have used the vote of each party's best placed candidate in order to calculate total vote and hence party shares. Where a candidate(s) was returned unopposed this is noted and turnout recorded as '0.0'.

Below the list of candidates is a further line of data. First, the name of the party whose candidate finished top of the poll at the corresponding election in 1995 (or 1996/1997 in some unitary authorities). In 97 local authorities recent ward boundary changes have meant that it has not always been possible to indicate a winning party at the previous election. In multi-member wards it is important not to assume that the named party won all available seats in that ward. Next, is recorded the percentage turnout. Turnout is the proportion of the electorate that cast valid ballots at the election. In the overwhelming majority of cases turnout is that given by the local Electoral Administrator and has thus been calculated knowing the number of valid ballot papers issued. In the remaining cases we have ourselves calculated turnout from the available information. The figure to the right of the turnout represents the lead of the winning party over the second placed party in percentage terms rounded to one decimal place.

Candidates standing for local election use an extensive variety of party labels and we have felt obliged to reduce these to manageable numbers. Unless the party label included the word 'Independent' we have treated such candidates as if they were official party candidates. It was necessary to bring together a large number of candidates under the general heading of 'Independents'. In some cases we have retained the labels used by specific local parties when the number of candidates fielded has warranted it.
