We would like to acknowledge the helpful response by Returning Officers and Electoral Administrators to our requests for information, which this year extended to cover data on postal ballots, spoilt papers etc. Inevitably, there were teething problems with these additional data – we should make it clearer that information at the ward level is more valuable to us than that which has been combined into a summary figure for the local authority as a whole. More valuable still would be to obtain data for individual polling stations, which we know some Electoral Administrators routinely collect. If you are one of these then please feel free to get in touch with us directly.

Our thanks also go to the Electoral Commission, which provided support for our collection of data, principally that concerning the numbers voting by post and in person. The issues surrounding electoral registration and ballot security are on-going but it is only by assembling data such as these that we assess better both the nature of the problem and its solution. As before, we would also like to express our gratitude to David Cowling, Head of BBC Political Research, for sharing his data on the mayoral elections.

Although this Handbook is being published around the same time as previous editions that hides the fact that data collection was particularly frenetic in 2006. Much of this work was, in fact, accomplished by the end of June so that various other deadlines would not be compromised. Achieving this impressive task is only possible through a team effort. Much of the preparatory work is undertaken by Brian Cheal, a name that we know is familiar to all Electoral Administrators!. Later, the different expertise of Galina Borisyuk, Dawn Cole and Lawrence Ware is vital to the process of collating, processing, checking, re-checking and transforming the data. This year we can honestly say that deadlines would not have been reached without some excellent assistance provided by Elena Long. The phrase, ‘thrown in at the deep end’ doesn’t quite describe what was asked of Elena and it is testimony to her skills (not forgetting the good humour) that she was able to adapt so easily to life within the Elections Centre during what is a particularly frenetic period of the annual electoral cycle.

Introduction

In 2006 local council elections were held for 176 authorities, mainly across urban England (there were no elections in Scotland and Wales). There were whole council elections for 32 London boroughs (three of which also held mayoral elections), which meant contests for 1,861 seats. Elsewhere, in 36 metropolitan boroughs, 20 unitary councils and 88 shire district councils, about a third of all seats were contested at this stage of the electoral cycle. Together, this involved elections for over four thousand seats in more than three thousand wards - about one in five council seats countrywide were at stake. However, because the elections covered mostly urban areas some 21.7 million electors, some 58% of the English electorate, had an opportunity to vote.

Establishing prior electoral benchmarks is difficult because the baseline comparison year varies. For most the baseline year is 2002, reflecting the fact that councillors are normally elected for a four-year term. Then, Labour performed relatively well and the scope for losses in 2006 was therefore large. For more than fifty authorities, however, the baseline year is 2004, because ward boundary changes affected the electoral cycle. Those elections were fought against a backdrop of government difficulties stemming from the war in Iraq and having posted one of its worst ever set of results it was difficult for Labour's stock to fall still lower.

The results were mostly good for the Conservatives and sufficiently bad for Labour that pressure on the leadership intensified. The days of unequivocally good results for the Liberal Democrats are over, at least for the time being it appears. Our estimate of the national equivalent vote places the Conservatives on 39%, far ahead of Labour on 26%, with the Liberal Democrats placed third on 25%.

The Conservatives made net gains of 320 seats, the tenth consecutive set of elections where the Conservatives have registered gains. The attrition rate amongst Labour's ranks continues. Its net losses of 350 seats, together with the loss of 18 of its 46 councils means that the Conservatives are now well ahead of Labour and the Liberal Democrats as the largest party in local government, both of council seats and councils controlled (Table 1).

The London results were best for the Conservatives where the party made 185 gains, three-quarters of which came from Labour with the remainder mostly from the Liberal Democrats. However these gains were offset by losses, including 40 seats to the Liberal Democrats, bringing the party a net gain of 130 seats. Table 2 also shows the Conservatives gained control of four councils from Labour (Bexley, Croydon, Ealing, Hammersmith & Fulham) and a further three from no overall control (Harrow, Havering, Hillingdon). This takes the number of Conservative controlled boroughs from eight to fourteen. It would have been fifteen had the Conservative administration held on in Richmond on Thames. Labour's electoral strength in London, seriously depleted at the last general election, declined still further with net losses of 177 seats. More than half of these losses, 126 seats, were to the Conservatives. The party lost roughly one in five of its seats and majority control of Brent, Camden, Hounslow, Lewisham and Merton, although there was the small compensation of re-gaining majority control in Lambeth. The Liberal Democrats gained 40 seats from the Conservatives but lost 45 in return. It gained 61 seats from Labour but lost 46 in exchange. It was a similar story at the level of council control: the gain of Richmond cancelled by the loss of Islington.

Outside London, Conservative progress was less impressive, averaging less than two seat gains per council with most of those made in the shire districts. In fact, in the metropolitan boroughs the number of seats held by the main parties remained virtually static – a product of the fact that the overall picture was nearer to the results in 2004 rather than 2002. Coventry was gained by the Conservatives and this means that all but one of the five metropolitan boroughs it now controls are in the West Midlands. Some headway was made in the more affluent areas of some northern towns like Bolton and Wakefield. There are still no Conservative councillors in Liverpool, Manchester and also Newcastle where the party's vote fell five percentage points. There are no Conservative councillors currently in either of the university cities of Oxford or Cambridge although the party did do better in some shire districts, notably gaining control for the first time in Bassetlaw and Mole Valley.

Labour lost control of such authorities as Bury, Derby (which it had recently re-taken after a by-election victory), Plymouth (which it has since re-gained following a by-election), Stoke on Trent (re-gained in 2004 and now lost again) and Warrington. It only narrowly avoided defeat in Oldham. Gaining two councils from no overall control (South Lakeland and St. Albans) but losing two (Islington and Milton Keynes) aptly summarised the inertia characteristic of the Liberal Democrats' election performance.

Almost eight million votes were cast with one in three of those going to the Conservatives whose candidates contested the most seats (Table 3). Despite elections taking place in largely urban areas, Labour finished half a million votes behind. The Liberal Democrats were unable to field as many candidates but did receive one in four votes. The combined vote share for these three parties was 86%, illustrating the extent to which local voters are currently prepared to support parties outside the political mainstream. Fielding a record number of candidates the Greens contested more than one in three wards, while within the 'others' category the BNP also contested more seats than previously.

Across London, the Conservatives polled 35% (an increase of less than one point) but just over one in four voters supported it throughout the metropolitan boroughs. At the authority level the patchy nature of the Conservative vote becomes clearer (see Table A1). In thirteen of the 32 London boroughs the Conservatives captured 40% or more of votes, but in only six of the 36 metropolitan boroughs was it as popular. Interestingly, in exactly a quarter of London and metropolitan boroughs respectively the Conservatives failed to win more than one in five votes cast.

This is small comfort for Labour as vote share declines. Across London, for example, there was a six-point fall in the party vote. There was a double-digit vote collapse in six boroughs, led by Harrow with a decline of around 13-points (see Table A2). With more to lose, the decline for Labour over the same period, i.e. 2002-2006, across the metropolitan boroughs is more dramatic still (see details in the Aggregate Statistics on pp 2-4). Virtually half the boroughs show a ten-point decline or more in Labour support, with votes drifting primarily towards the Liberal Democrats and/or a diverse set of overtly anti-Labour local action groups or single-issue parties. This represents a significant fraction of former Labour local voters deserting the party. Even when comparisons with 2004 are made, while Labour's vote share overall rose by just over one percentage point it declined further in a third of boroughs (see Table A2).

The Liberal Democrats naturally highlighted the record 17% seat share in London, although this represented only a modest increase on the 1994 and 2002 elections. There is evidence that the surge of support, evident in the first half of the 1990s, has stabilised; for every borough where the party's vote rose there was one where it fell. The most dramatic fall of more than twenty-points in Barking and Dagenham came because the party fielded just four candidates compared with the 28 that contested in 2002. This omission left the BNP as the main challengers to Labour in the borough. But while a lack of contestation explains that decline, in other authorities where the party has formed the local administration, it may be an adverse reaction among some voters which explains the performance. In Islington lost to no overall control, the party's vote fell by nine points, similar to the drop in Kingston. In metropolitan boroughs, using the 2004 base, the party's vote fell in a third of authorities, including a double-digit drop in Bolton, but rose by five percentage points or more in ten others, headed by Newcastle, Gateshead and Oldham. Overall, for every seat gained by a Liberal Democrat there was one that was lost and vote share declined by two percentage points. Nevertheless, as the overall figures show, for a third party in a first past the post voting system the Liberal Democrats show an impressive efficiency in attracting support that contributes towards the winning of seats.

The growth of new party registration with the Electoral Commission continues, and local voters continue to experiment. This year we recorded votes for a total of 101 registered parties, two-thirds of which contested fewer than five seats. In terms of vote share the greatest success came in London where more than one in six votes were cast in favour of candidates standing either as Independents or representing one of the minor parties. The Greens were prominent, winning almost 5% of the vote overall and presenting candidates in a third of wards. The best showing of 8% vote share came in London, most notably in Hackney where one in five voters propelled the party into second place. That vote only brought one seat, however, but in Lewisham the party secured six council seats with a similar vote share. Progress was made in Sheffield and Manchester but there was a bigger impact still in both Oxford and Norwich.

The BNP doubled its number of seats, winning 32 in total, with the campaign in Barking and Dagenham attracting national media attention. Overall, the party attracted more than a quarter of million (3%) votes, and contested more than one in every ten wards. Fewer than one in ten BNP votes were cast in London (it only contested 28 of 624 wards) with three-quarters coming in the metropolitan boroughs where it contested almost a third of the wards. Although it lost seats in both Bradford and Calderdale the BNP's vote share across West Yorkshire suggests that the party could challenge Labour in some wards in 2007. By contrast, the United Kingdom Independence Party, UKIP, won less than a third of the votes cast for BNP, despite contesting in just fifty fewer wards. George Galloway's Respect party mounted its strongest campaign in Tower Hamlets where the leader has his parliamentary seat. It now forms the main opposition to Labour after eleven of its candidates were successfully elected.

Three-quarters of wards provided electors with a choice from among candidates representing the Conservative, Labour and Liberal Democrat parties. In the cities, party competition was even more pronounced, with 81% and 89% of seats in the metropolitan and London boroughs respectively contested in this manner. In 17% of all cases electors could at least choose between candidates from either Conservative or Labour. There are a negligible number of wards, less than 2%, where electors had a restricted choice of just one candidate from among the main parties.

More than fifteen thousand candidates (Table 4) contested the elections, an average of 3.5 candidates per seat. In fact, only nineteen seats, most in the shire districts, went uncontested. The highest ratio of candidates to seats (3.9:1) is in the metropolitan boroughs but that is little more than the lowest ratio in the shire districts (3.2:1). Three wards in London, two in Tower Hamlets and a third in Havering, saw sixteen candidates compete. Almost four hundred wards had ten or more candidates challenging for election.

Women candidates numbered almost five thousand, 29.0% of the total. In the smaller shire districts women comprised 31% of all candidates compared to 26% in the metropolitan boroughs, which traditionally have been unable to recruit women candidates. The Conservatives continue to lag behind the other parties in the recruitment of women. Less than 30% of the party's candidates were women, compared with 33% for Labour and 34% for the Liberal Democrats. This pattern is common for all types of local authority. The most successful party in recruiting women were the Greens, 41% of whose candidates in 2006 were women.

Almost fourteen hundred women were successfully elected, just over 28% of women candidates and 31% of all councillors elected in 2006. Women fared best in London, where now a third of councillors are women, a rise since 2002 of approximately four percentage points. In the remaining local authority types about three in ten councillors elected this time are women. As with recruitment so also with electoral success – the Conservative party had a smaller proportion of its women candidates elected than the other parties. Whereas 28% of Conservative women candidates were successful, the proportion for Labour and Liberal Democrats was 35% and 31% respectively. Indeed, ceteris paribus, Labour's women candidates had a greater chance of success than men. More than half the councillors elected for the Greens are women.

Some 3,237 incumbents sought another four year term, meaning that 73% of all vacancies were fought by an incumbent. It is, perhaps, unsurprising that 84% of contests in the metropolitan boroughs featured an incumbent because these councillors were elected as recently as 2004 at whole council elections following ward boundary changes. However, another way of considering this is that 16% of incumbents, for unknown reasons, chose not to continue despite the short time since last elected. By contrast, in London where seats were last fought four years before, there was a higher rate of retirement. Here, 69% of contests featured an incumbent candidate – or a drop-out rate of about a third.

Among the reasons for leaving some retiring councillors might well cite the prospect of defeat – better to jump than be pushed. This may explain the rather high success rate among incumbents, 2,645 (82%) of whom were re-elected in 2006. The smallest rate of re-election was in London where 80% were returned but this is not entirely unexpected given the greater turnover of seats across the capital. Neither is it unexpected that the metropolitan boroughs with a relatively small turnover of seats should show the most success for incumbents, 86% of whom were re-elected. Six in ten councillors elected in 2006 were returning incumbents, ranging from 55% in London to 72% in the metropolitan areas.

The slump in voter turnout following Labour's general election victory in 1997 now appears to have eased, at least in most types of authority. We estimate a 36% aggregate turnout in 2006; the highest figure is 40% in London and the lowest, 34%, in the 20 unitary councils. Other things equal, turnout tends to be higher in authorities with whole council elections compared to those that re-elect only a fraction of the council body at any one time. These figures show a general rise on four years before, some six percentage points in London and about a four-point rise elsewhere. But in the metropolitan boroughs turnout declined when compared with the levels in 2004. There are three competing explanations for this decline. First, there is the nature of the two elections; 2004 brought new boundaries and whole council elections whereas 2006 was a partial council election. Second, the local elections for 2004 were postponed from the usual date in May and moved to coincide with the June elections for the European Parliament in a bid to raise turnout; without synchronous elections turnout could fall. Third, in 2004 the government experimented with all-postal elections in four English regions. In common with previous experiments this raised turnout; without all-postal voting in place the decline in turnout is likely to be greatest in these four regions. The initial impression, exploiting the fact that some districts and unitary authorities share the 2004 baseline with the metropolitan boroughs, is that the move away from all-postal elections produced all, or virtually all, of the turnout decline for authorities that held elections in these two years.

The number of uncontested wards/seats is extremely low reflecting both the urban nature of most wards with an election in 2006 and Labour's failing popularity that brings even the 'safest' seat into the range of competition. The level of three-party competition, i.e. candidates representing Conservative,

Labour and the Liberal Democrats, was greatest for London borough wards but even in the shire districts two-thirds of all wards featured candidates from these parties.

The Mayoral elections

In addition to the mayor of London, first elected in 2000, there are a further twelve directly elected mayors across England. All mayors are chosen by the Supplementary Vote method. A third of these mayoral offices became due for re-election in 2006, with contests held in three London boroughs (Hackney, Lewisham and Newham) and one shire district, Watford. In all four authorities the incumbent mayor sought and won re-election (Table 6). In Watford Dorothy Thornhill, the only woman mayor, received an absolute majority of first votes and a count of second votes was therefore unnecessary. Of the remaining three elections two (Hackney and Newham) resulted in the winning candidate receiving an absolute majority (first and second votes combined as a proportion of all first votes cast) but in Lewisham the successful candidate's final total remained less than half of all first votes cast.

There were no dramatic changes in the number of candidates contesting the mayoralty elections this time compared with previously: in three cases the number reduced by one while in the remaining case the number increased by one. While independent candidates have in the past been successful, for example, Hartlepool and Middlesbrough, these particular contests were all won by major party candidates although in Newham the second-placed 'runoff' candidate represented the Respect party. Given that voters are casting a ballot simultaneously with the local election it is unsurprising to find little or no deviation in turnout between the two elections.

Using the Handbook

In 2006 there were elections in England for a total of 176 local authorities comprising 32 London boroughs, 36 metropolitan boroughs, 20 unitary authorities and 88 shire districts. Additionally, there were four mayoral elections in Hackney, Lewisham, Newham and Watford respectively.

The Handbook is organised into four sections, which cover the London, metropolitan, unitary and shire district councils respectively. Within these categories councils are organised alphabetically. Results are reported in alphabetical order of ward name. Election results have generally been taken from figures provided by, and checked with, Electoral Administrators.

Before the ward results we have provided a section containing aggregate data covering each local authority. Results for each authority were aggregated to produce this set of summary statistics. These include the percentage vote share for a range of parties and independent candidates. Where more than one councillor is elected then the vote of the best placed candidate for each party is used in calculating total vote. In contests featuring multiple Independent candidates these were grouped according to the number of seats in a ward. In the case of a three-member seat with six Independent candidates, therefore, the votes of the first and fourth placed Independent contribute towards the total vote figure. The number of seats contested and the number of seats won by each party is also noted.

Turnout, in brackets after the name of the authority, is the average turnout in those divisions/wards which had a contested election. Table A3 in the Appendix contains details of local authority turnout that has been calculated using different methods. These methods for calculating local authority level turnout will produce slightly different figures for those authorities that have a large range for electorates and where complex patterns of contestation result in an under- or over-estimate of actual votes cast. In the majority of cases the differences between the two methods are rather small.

In those authorities where a direct comparison with the 2002 election is possible we have also provided the percentage change for the different parties. In some councils this has not proved practicable because of the nature of their electoral cycles.

The final two lines of the summary of aggregate statistics provide information relating to the number of candidates fielded by each party as well as the number of candidates that were successfully elected. Note, that since some councils are electing only a fraction of the council body that the 'seats won' category is not an equivalent to the full council composition.

In the main body of the book the results for each ward are listed in alphabetical order within each local authority. The figure in brackets is the electorate for 2006. The practice adopted by local authorities for calculating this figure varies but the introduction of rolling electoral registers means that this figure is a good approximation of the numbers eligible to vote on election day. Nevertheless, it has been impossible to adopt a standard definition of electorate or reliably to identify the particular procedures used by each authority.

The appearance of a date in [square brackets] after the electorate indicates that the election for some reason was not held on May 4 but was contested on the later, specified date. This year there were only two such contests. The first special election was for the Brus ward in Hartlepool, which was held on June 8. The second election was held a week later on June 15 for the Nascot ward in Watford.

There were also two errors in the declaration of results that were subsequently corrected following election petitions. In Birmingham the error was caused by the fact that there was a double vacancy in the Kingstanding ward. Unfortunately, the procedures for conducting such a count did not work smoothly with the consequence that some votes were counted twice. The initial declaration saw a candidate from the BNP, Sharon Ebanks, declared a winner alongside the Labour candidate, Zoe Hopkins. Once the error was spotted the vote counts were altered, with the consequence that the two Labour candidates, Hopkins and now Catharine Grundy, were deemed the winners. But because the result had been officially declared it required an election petition to be filed by one of the unsuccessful candidates to overturn the result. The Handbook lists the corrected result.

The second incident also affected the BNP although the outcome was in complete contrast to the Birmingham example. In Barking and Dagenham when the result for the Eastbury ward was declared the votes for the BNP candidate, Jeffrey Steed, were incorrectly given as 102 rather than as 1002.

Instead of finishing at the top of the poll a clerical error had placed him bottom. Again, an election petition was required to overturn the result and substitute the correct result which appears in the Handbook.

As the Handbook goes to press there is a continuing investigation of the election in the Foleshill ward in Coventry. The handbook records the declared result from May 4.

Candidates are listed in descending order of vote within each ward. The first initial is given; 'Ms.' after a candidate's name indicates a woman; and '*' indicates that the candidate was a sitting councillor, although not necessarily for the same ward. Vote is the number of electors who supported each candidate and Share the proportion of the total number who cast a valid ballot supporting each candidate. The process of rounding means that some shares do not necessarily sum to 100.

In the case of multi-member wards where more than one vacancy was filled we have used the vote of each party's best placed candidate in order to calculate total vote and hence party shares. Where a candidate(s) was returned unopposed then either '0' or '0.0' are used in the fields for vote, share and turnout.

Below the list of candidates is a further line of data. First, we print the name of the party whose candidate finished top of the poll at the previous election – note: the year varies according to the particular electoral cycle for that ward.

Next, is recorded the percentage turnout. Turnout is the proportion of the electorate that cast valid ballots at the election. In the overwhelming majority of cases in 2006 turnout is that given by the local Electoral Administrator and has thus been calculated knowing the number of valid ballot papers issued. In a relatively small number of cases we have ourselves calculated turnout from the available information but this year only for single member wards – turnout data for all multimember divisions/wards has been collected from Electoral Administrators. The figure to the right of the turnout represents the lead of the winning party over the second placed party in percentage terms rounded to one decimal place. The process of rounding means that in some cases the percentage majority may not be exactly the same as the winning party's vote share minus the second-placed party's share.

Candidates standing for local election use an extensive variety of party labels that now have to be officially registered with the Electoral Commission. These have been used throughout the Handbook, leading to a proliferation of party labels. These labels, and the abbreviations we have used, are described below.
