Combined elections create particular kinds of pressures on local Electoral Administrators and we record our thanks to the vast majority of them that responded quickly and efficiently to our requests for information about both the general and local elections in 2010. Our thanks also go to the Electoral Commission, which provided support for data collection, principally that concerning the number of electors voting by post and in-person. We owe David Cowling, Head of BBC Political Research, a debt of gratitude for once again sharing a range of data with us, particularly his mayoral election results.

This Handbook is published in record time but this is only possible because of the experience, teamwork and dedication of those rightly named in the list of authors. The process of compiling local election results gets underway in February when lists of authorities and wards to be contested are prepared. Nomination lists are obtained in April and the results collection begins the day after polling day. This year this process had to run in parallel with similar work being undertaken on the general election as well as the conduct of a national survey of local election candidates. We are fortunate in being able to draw upon people with the skills that made this schedule manageable. Although not working directly on the Local Elections Handbook this is an opportune moment to record our sincere thanks to Mary Shears, Marilyn Darch, Jeremy Johns and Luke Sloan for their assistance in other aspects of our data collection work this summer.

Introduction

Labour lost the general election on May 6 but its local government recovery began immediately with a net gain of almost four hundred council seats fought across 164 local authorities in England. All 32 London borough councils were re-elected but in 36 metropolitan boroughs, 20 unitary and 69 shire districts only a third of seats fell vacant in 2010. In a further seven district councils there were contests for half the seats but for two authorities, Exeter and Norwich the elections were cancelled pending structural reorganisation. A total of more than four thousand seats in almost three thousand wards were contested.

Labour's performance benefitted because most of the seats contested were previously fought in 2006 when, as the party of national government, Labour took a pounding in the local polls. The advance moved on three fronts simultaneously with three-figure gains made from the Conservatives, Liberal Democrats and smaller parties and Independents alike. The party's improved showing was assisted greatly by the increased turnout with many more Labour voters participating because of the combined local and general elections. Nevertheless, as Table 1 shows, the Conservatives remain comfortably ahead of the other parties both in terms of council seats and councils controlled.

As it enters a period in government the Conservative party currently has over nine thousand council seats, more than double the combined total of its two nearest rivals, and controls virtually half of all councils in Great Britain. A big gap, both in terms of seats and council control, has opened up with Labour and it will take a number of years for the electoral cycle to run its course before Labour can re-establish itself although 2011 will offer an opportunity because many thousands of seats are at stake. The Liberal Democrats continue to lose ground at the local government level and this may have an increasingly negative impact on the party's success in securing parliamentary representation. A combination of losing hundreds of local council seats and a 'No' vote in the national referendum on voting reform will bring to pressure to bear on the party leadership and its role in the coalition government.

The whole-council elections in London provided real opportunities for Labour; Ealing, Enfield and Harrow were captured directly from the Conservatives while Brent, Camden, Hounslow, Islington, Southwark and Waltham Forest moved from no party to single party Labour administrations. In Merseyside Labour gained both St. Helens and the prize scalp of Liverpool as well as Coventry in the West Midlands.

Despite the Conservative presence in local government generally it is significant that after losing Bury, North Tyneside and Solihull across the 36 metropolitan boroughs the party now has majority control in just three - Dudley, Trafford and Walsall. There was though the consolation of re-taking Richmond upon Thames from the Liberal Democrats, the two Hampshire districts of Gosport and Hart as well as Redditch borough in the west midlands.

The Liberal Democrat performance in the local elections continued the bitter-sweet nature of its general election story, seat losses alongside the role of deal makers or breakers. Its leader's constituency presence in Sheffield meant that the media were on hand to record the party's loss of the council. Media interest in 'Bigot-gate' helped publicise further not only the Liberal Democrats' loss of the parliamentary constituency but also the council in Rochdale. The consolation prizes were the gain of Winchester from the Conservatives and wins in Burnley and Cheltenham.

One of the few authorities to find its local elections receiving national media attention was Barking and Dagenham where the BNP party leader, Nick Griffin, contested the parliamentary seat of Barking. Beforehand, it was felt that his presence there had less to do with his own parliamentary chances but was rather designed to save the seats of the twelve BNP councillors elected in 2006. With Griffin coming third in his own contest all of his party's council seats were lost as were others in Leeds, Sandwell, Stoke on Trent, and Solihull.

The Conservative lead over Labour in the popular vote was relatively small with the Liberal Democrats in a clear third place although it should be noted that the party fielded many fewer candidates than its two larger rivals (Table 3).

The Green party presented candidates in 40% of wards overall, performing rather well in some of the London boroughs, while the BNP and UKIP contested in a quarter and a fifth of wards respectively. Independents and candidates representing the smaller parties also featured prominently.

Despite finishing a close second in votes Labour won a larger fraction of seats than did the Conservatives, finishing with 42% in total. This vote to seat conversion was especially pronounced in London where despite winning roughly the same percentage of votes as their main rival Labour went on to win almost half the available seats in the whole council elections. Labour's vote advantage in the metropolitan borough elections where it opened up a thirteen-point lead over the Conservatives meant it easily won a majority of seats, 63% of the total.

The unitary council elections also brought an electoral advantage for Labour – winning 43% of the seats for a lower vote share than the Conservatives. But it was a different story in the shire district elections. Here the Conservative party enjoyed broader support and converted a 43% vote into a seat share of 53%. In these particular authorities Labour, despite more candidates contesting, finished with fewer votes than the Liberal Democrats did.

Generally, the Liberal Democrats were under-represented in seats, particularly so in the London borough elections. In these contests the Liberal Democrats' ratio of seat to vote share is just 0.6:1, somewhat lower than the 0.9:1 in the shire districts. But this is rather better than the smaller parties. The Greens, for example, managed a ratio of 0.3:1 in the shire and unitary authorities and just 0.02:1 in London.

The whole council elections in London provide an opportunity to measure the proportionality of the borough by borough outcomes using the Loosemore-Hanby index. The index is essentially a measure of the surplus of seat over vote share. An index of zero constitutes a perfectly proportional outcome where each party's seat share equates to its vote share. Obviously, as the scale moves away from zero the election outcome becomes more disproportional; generally speaking an index score of below 10 suggests the result is proportional. The index score for London as a whole is 20 but there is considerable variance across the boroughs. In both Barking and Dagenham and Newham Labour won every council seat after securing 62% of the vote in the latter and only 47% in the former. In Hackney and Tower Hamlets also Labour enjoyed a more than forty point advantage of seat over vote share. On occasion the voting system benefitted the Conservative party, most notably in Bexley, Bromley, Wandsworth and Westminster where there were thirty point advantages of seat over vote shares. Only the borough of Sutton provides an example of a comparable "winner's bonus" for the Liberal Democrats.

Figure 1 shows the share of vote since 1990 for the three main parties across the London boroughs and metropolitan boroughs respectively. The top line represents Labour's vote, largely dominant in the metropolitan boroughs although the gap with the Conservatives narrowed after the 1997 general election victory. Conservative support is rather interesting over the twenty year period, fluctuating little across the London boroughs and, apart from the post-general election peak in May 1992, marooned below 30% in the metropolitan boroughs. The small dip in vote for the Conservatives in London between 1990 and 1994 largely went towards the Liberal Democrats but its vote has remained constant after that rise. It is a different story outside of London with the Liberal Democrats increasing vote share as Labour's declined. Now that Labour is out of government it may be that it will begin to re-gain some of the ground lost over the past thirteen years.

Table 4 summarises the position regarding turnout, the general state of party competition, the level and success for women candidates as well as the fate of incumbents seeking re-election. Almost 22 million electors were eligible to vote in the local elections and because of the general election a relatively high percentage, approximately 62%, did so. Only five out of 4,223 seats went uncontested. Competition for seats, measured solely by candidates nominated for election rather than any evidence of local campaigning on the ground, was respectable with a ratio of almost four candidates for each vacancy. The highest ratio is in the metropolitan boroughs with 4.4 candidates per vacancy. The lowest ratio, 3.3 candidates for each vacancy, is in the shire district areas. More than three-quarters of wards featured candidates from the three main parties while in a further 17% of cases there was a contest between the two main parties. Voters in London borough elections faced the widest choice of parties with more than nine in every ten wards featuring at least one candidate from each of the three main parties.

Women numbered almost five thousand candidates, just under a third of the total, a fraction that has now remained steady for the past two decades. There were six local authorities where women candidates accounted for 40-50% of all those challenging for election. In twelve authorities the proportion of women candidates is relatively low, between 10-20% of the total. There is some evidence in 2010, however, that at least some local parties are selecting women to contest in their more winnable wards – women comprise 31% of those people elected in 2010 and 34% of elected Labour councillors was a woman. Although both Labour and the Liberal Democrats chose a female candidate for every two male ones selected local Conservative parties selected fewer women; 28% of their candidates only, the same as the BNP percentage. In contrast the Green party selected over 600 women to stand for local election, 38% of their total candidates. It is fitting perhaps that Caroline Lucas should become the party's first elected member of Parliament.

A note caution should be sounded about the success or otherwise of incumbents. Increasingly, many candidates are listing their chosen rather than given names on the ballot papers – candidates that formerly appeared as Elizabeth, for example, now opt for Liz or Betty etc. This has made it more difficult to reconcile names on the ballot across elections and may have some limited consequences for the accuracy of our incumbency data.

The data show that just under than three thousand incumbents sought re-election; slightly less than one in five candidates contesting was an incumbent councillor and seven in ten seat contests featured an incumbent. A large percentage, 85%, of these challenges was successful with the councillor re-elected. Overall, six in ten of the people elected in 2010 are re-elected incumbents. Naturally, Labour incumbents did best with a success rate of 97%. Some 87% of Conservative incumbents were re-elected but that drops to 76% for Liberal Democrats. In two authorities, one shire district and a unitary council in more than 90% of the seats an incumbent was seeking re-election. In a further 66 authorities the proportion of seats fought by incumbents was between 70-80% of the total. Six authorities saw relatively few seats (half or fewer vacancies) contested by incumbents.

The Mayoral elections

The three London borough mayors were all successfully re-elected (Table 5). Sir Robin Wales in Newham and Jules Pipe in Hackney each won an outright majority of first votes making a count of second votes unnecessary. Steve Bullock in Lewisham fell just short of an overall majority, but his victory over the Liberal Democrats using the second or supplementary vote proved a formality. The Lewisham result provides further evidence that many electors do not cast second votes that are eligible for the supplementary vote count, either choosing to support the same candidate twice or giving a second vote to someone eliminated after the first round of voting.

The outcome of the vote for Watford's mayor is fascinating because it gives a clear indication of the extent to which voters are continuing to make choices that are contingent on the office being elected. Dorothy Thornhill was re-elected Mayor for the Liberal Democrats with slightly less than 50% of all first preference votes, and her party lost just one of the nine seats it was defending in the council election. By contrast, in the battle for the Labour held parliamentary constituency on the same day the Conservatives leapfrogged the Liberal Democrats to move from third to first place in the general election.

Using the Handbook

In 2010 there were elections in England for a total of 164 local authorities comprising 32 London boroughs, 36 metropolitan boroughs, 20 unitary authorities and 76 shire districts. Two authorities, Norwich and Exeter, had their elections postponed pending structural reorganisation. Additionally, there were four mayoral elections in Hackney, Lewisham, Newham and Watford respectively; the mayoral results are listed in the Introduction.

The Handbook is organised into four sections, which cover the London, metropolitan, unitary and shire district councils respectively. Within these categories councils are organised alphabetically. Results are reported in alphabetical order of ward name. Election results have generally been taken from figures provided by, and checked with local Electoral Administrators. Before the ward results there is a section containing aggregate data for each local authority, compiled by adding together party votes for each local ward. The aggregate data include the percentage vote share for a range of parties and independent candidates. Where more than one councillor is elected then the vote of the best placed candidate for each party is used in calculating total vote. In contests featuring multiple Independent candidates these are grouped according to the number of seats in a ward. In the example of a three-member seat with six Independent candidates, therefore, the votes of the first and fourth placed Independent contribute towards the total vote figure. The number of seats contested and the number of seats won by each party is also noted. Turnout, in brackets after the name of the authority, is the average turnout in those wards which had a contested election. Table A2 in the Appendix contains details of local authority turnout that has been calculated using a range of methods. These methods will produce slightly different figures for those authorities that have a large range for electorates and where complex patterns of contestation result in an under- or over-estimate of actual votes cast. In the majority of cases the differences between the two methods are rather small. In those authorities where a direct comparison with the 2006 election is possible we have calculated the percentage change in vote share for the different parties. In some cases this has not proved practicable because of the nature of their electoral cycles. The final two lines of the summary of aggregate statistics provide information relating to the number of candidates fielded by each party as well as the number of candidates that were successfully elected. Note, that because some councils are electing only a fraction of the total seats the 'seats won' category is not an equivalent to the current full council composition.

In the main body of the book the results for each ward are listed in alphabetical order within each local authority. The figure in brackets adjacent to the ward name is the local electorate for 2010. The practice adopted by local authorities for calculating this figure varies but the introduction of rolling electoral registers means that this figure is a good approximation of the numbers eligible to vote on election day. Nevertheless, it has been impossible to adopt a standard definition of electorate or reliably to identify the particular procedures used by each authority. The appearance of a date in [square brackets] after the electorate indicates that the election for some reason was not held on May 6 but was contested on the later, specified date. This year there were only two such contests. In the London borough of Camden the election in the Haverstock ward was postponed until Tuesday, May 25. Another postponed election was the contest for a seat in Ore ward, located in Hastings borough. This was subsequently held on June 17. The results of these postponed elections are used in the calculation of any aggregate statistics.

Candidates are listed in descending order of vote within each ward. The first initial only is given; 'Ms.' after a candidate's name indicates a woman; and '*' indicates that the candidate was a sitting councillor, although not necessarily for the same ward. Two points should be noted. First, it is sometimes difficult to establish from a person's name whether they are male or female. Although lists of forenames are consulted there are some names that are absent from such lists. Second, we are finding it increasingly difficult to track some candidates, even incumbents that are seeking re-election. This is because of the apparently growing practice for candidates to use preferred names on the ballot paper – Anthonys become Tonys, Elizabeths become Liz/Betty etc. This problem may contribute towards a small under-estimate of the number of incumbents seeking re-election in 2010.

Vote is the number of electors who supported each candidate and Share the proportion of the total number who cast a valid ballot supporting each candidate. The process of rounding means that some shares do not necessarily sum to 100. In the case of multi-member wards where more than one vacancy was filled we have used the vote of each party's best placed candidate in order to calculate total vote and hence party shares. Where a candidate(s) was returned unopposed then either '0' or '0.0' are used in the fields for vote, share and turnout. Below the list of candidates is a further line of data. First, we print the party whose candidate finished top of the poll at the previous election – note: the year may vary according to the particular electoral cycle for that ward. Next, is recorded the percentage turnout. Turnout is the proportion of the electorate that cast valid ballots at the election. In the overwhelming majority of cases in 2010 turnout is that given by the local Electoral Administrator and has thus been calculated knowing the number of valid ballot papers issued. In a relatively small number of cases we have ourselves calculated turnout from the available information but this year only for single member wards – turnout data for all multimember divisions/wards has been collected from local authority Electoral Administrators. The figure to the right of the turnout represents the lead of the winning party over the second placed party in percentage terms rounded to one decimal place. The process of rounding means that in some cases the percentage majority may not be exactly the same as the winning party's vote share minus the second-placed party's share.

Candidates standing for local election use an extensive variety of party labels that now have to be officially registered with the Electoral Commission. These have been used throughout the Handbook, leading to a proliferation of party labels. These labels, and the abbreviations we have used, are described overleaf
