Acknowledgements

We would like, as always, to acknowledge the response by Electoral Administrators to our requests for information, which now extends to cover data on postal ballots, spoilt papers etc. As our demands grow we hope that more local authorities take advantage of our offer to provide them with a detailed record of our data holdings from 1973 onwards for their particular authority.

Our thanks also go to the Electoral Commission, which provided support for our data collection, principally that concerning the numbers for postal and in person voting. The issues surrounding electoral registration and ballot security continue to divide opinion but it is only by assembling data that a proper analysis can be undertaken.

Although this Handbook is being published around the same time as previous editions the amount of work involved is considerably greater than is usual. Much of the initial data collection was accomplished before July and reflects a great team effort. It's a constant source of surprise to us that we're all still speaking to one another!

Introduction

Local elections took place in England and Scotland on May 3, 2007. No local elections were scheduled for Wales although voters there re-elected the Assembly for Wales. In England, 312 local authorities held elections, the majority of which were of the whole council. Throughout the metropolitan boroughs and some district and unitary councils only a fraction (generally a third) of seats was up for election. In Scotland a new system of voting using the Single Transferable Vote (STV) was introduced. A detailed analysis of the Scottish voting can be found in H.M. Bochel and D.T. Denver, Scottish Council Elections, 2007. This introduction is largely concerned with the English local council results apart from drawing attention to the general state of parties currently.

The overall picture shows that the 2007 local elections in England were a triumph for the Conservatives and that in Scotland the change in voting system led to many more hung councils. The Conservatives captured votes, seats and council control from both Labour and the Liberal Democrats. Boundary changes complicate matters slightly but the party made a net gain of 38 councils and more than 900 council seats. Labour's losses amounted to about 550 seats while the Liberal Democrats are about 300 councillors down on where they had been. Table 1 shows the current state of the parties following the May contests.

Table 2 describes the 75 councils that changed hands. While some of the Conservative gains were from no overall control direct transfers from other parties created better news value. The capture of Blackpool, Gravesham, Lincoln and Plymouth from Labour and Bournemouth and Torbay from the Liberal Democrats are particularly noteworthy. But the party's continuing rehabilitation in places like Dartford, Dover, and Rugby are equally important.

Labour's net loss of eight councils could not conceal the damage done by the loss of council seats. Although the Liberal Democrats deprived Labour of its majority on Sheffield city council it made a net loss of three councils. The Greens did well in Brighton and Hove, almost succeeding in pushing Labour into third place and also in Norwich, where the Liberal Democrats' second place is under threat.

Across England elections were scheduled in 6,626 wards with 10,486 seats at stake. Over half (50.7%) of available seats were won by candidates from the Conservative party, clearly benefiting most from the operation of the voting system (Table 3). Its main rivals, Labour and Liberal Democrats, won 18% and 21% of seats respectively. The Green party enjoyed some success, winning 63 seats. One in ten seats is now held by councillors who stood either as Independents or for one of the smaller parties that now proliferate in many local authorities.

The Conservative party obtained 38% of votes overall and gained approximately 900 additional seats following a four-point rise in vote share based on its 2003 performance. The Liberal Democrats finished marginally ahead of Labour in the popular vote although the party did contest more wards and seats. Both parties made a net loss of seats – Labour's losses totalled almost 500 and the Liberal Democrats about 300. Labour's vote fell by five percentage points (based on 2003) and by one point for the Liberal Democrats.

Candidates describing themselves on the ballot paper as 'Independents' obtained 6% of votes while the Green party, which fielded a record 1,416 candidates, emerged with 3% of the popular vote having challenged in just under one in five wards. There are around 150 fewer Independent councillors following these elections but continuing the trend of recent years the number elected for minor parties rose by more than sixty. Despite contesting 500 fewer wards the British National Party received almost as many votes as did the Green party but it was much less successful in converting that support into seats. The United Kingdom Independence Party fielded almost a thousand candidates but won 1.5% share of votes and just five council seats.

Labour's continuing relative strength in the larger cities is reflected in results from the metropolitan boroughs. While more than one in three votes went to Labour candidates almost one in two of the seats did so. The Liberal Democrats too experienced a higher share of seats, about one in four, compared to votes received. Despite winning a higher share of votes, some 27%, the Conservative party won a smaller share of seats – 23% overall in the metropolitan borough authorities. In terms of change in vote share the outcome in 2007 is remarkably similar to that of 2006 with only the Liberal Democrats and a fall of two percentage points experiencing any real change in support. BNP candidates achieved their best result in the cities, capturing 6% of the popular vote.

A majority of seats at stake, some 6,743, (64%), were in the English shire districts that use "all-out" elections and therefore re-elect the entire council every four years. A range of single and multi-member wards are used. In these particular authorities the Conservative party received 44% of votes and 55% of seats, contesting more than nine in ten wards or eight in ten seats. By contrast the Labour party mounted a challenge in less than half the wards and won only one in eight. The Liberal Democrats won one in five seats after polling slightly fewer than one in four votes, and contesting almost two-thirds of the wards. Independent candidates won around one in ten votes and their share of seats was only slightly lower (9.1%).

In the shire districts utilising an annual electoral cycle the general pattern of voting is similar although Labour performed better, reaching almost 20% of the overall vote and seat shares. By contrast, Independent candidates do not contest as many wards in this type of district authority and their vote share overall is a third of that in the 'all-out' districts.

Additionally, there are results from 45 unitary councils, 20 of which have elections by thirds, the remainder for the whole council. In both types the Conservatives finished on top in vote and seats although the 'winner's bonus' is greater in the all-out unitary authorities. Labour's vote is rather higher in authorities with annual elections than the whole council variety while support for the Liberal Democrats is more or less evenly distributed.

Analysing change in vote share requires some care since the comparison point is for different years dependent upon each local authority's electoral cycle. In the unitary authorities with election by thirds there is little change in support from the last occasion these wards were fought in 2006. But for unitary councils on a four-yearly cycle the Conservative vote rose by four points, Labour's fell by a similar amount while there was a larger fall of five points for the Liberal Democrats. Share gains were made by candidates from smaller parties who collectively increased vote share by more than three points.

More than twenty eight thousand candidates contested almost ten and a half thousand seats at the May 2007 local elections in England – an overall candidate/seat ratio of 2.7 and lower than in 2006 (Table 4). The relatively large number of candidates is influenced considerably by the seats in the shire districts with whole council elections. More than half of all candidates, 54%, fought an election in this category of authority. In these shire districts the ratio of candidates to seats is 2.3, the lowest for all authority types. By contrast, in two types electing a third of the council members where party competition is generally greater and single member wards are common the ratios are higher (4.2 metropolitan boroughs; 3.9 unitary councils).

Incumbent elected as (%) of all councillors elected in 2007	72.6	59.1	63.8	60.2	59.7	60.9

Over four hundred wards were uncontested, almost 7% of the total (the uncontested seat figures are 582 and 5.5% respectively). Just five councillors in the metropolitan boroughs (all in Knowsley) and 15 in the unitary authorities (all except one in Rutland) were returned unopposed – less than 1% of the total seats falling vacant. Just 0.3% of the electorate in both the metropolitan boroughs and unitary councils were effectively deprived of the opportunity to vote because of this. A significant majority of uncontested wards/seats are in the shire districts with all-out elections. One in ten wards, and a slightly smaller proportion of seats, 8%, were uncontested in these authorities. These cases were overwhelmingly concentrated in small wards in rural councils. Some 5.4% of the total district electorate were affected by uncontested seats. The overall figure is 3.0% of the electorate.

Of the candidates contesting seats some 37% were elected – better than a one in three chance of success. A quarter of candidates contesting seats in the metropolitan boroughs and unitary councils (thirds) were successful but in the slightly less competitive atmosphere of the shire districts more than four in ten of candidates were elected.

The large number of vacancies may in part explain why the pattern of party competition is more fragmented for this stage of the local electoral cycle. More than three thousand wards featured a contest between candidates from the three main political parties – 45% of the overall total. In a number of cases a local party chose not to contest all the available seats in a ward – hence the differences between the percentages for wards and seats contested. A separate measure of three-party competition, therefore, is to count the number of three-party contests for each seat; 36% of seats were thus contested.

Variations in the pattern of party competition remain. In urban authorities, considering together the metropolitan boroughs and some of the unitary councils, a large majority of wards continue to feature candidates from the three main parties. In other unitary councils and those shire districts electing by thirds, the level of competition is not as great, with less than two-thirds of ward ballots featuring candidates from each of the main parties. In the remaining shire districts, however, just over one in five seats saw main party candidates challenge. The decision by Labour not to field candidates for these vacancies accounts for a significant part of this, with three in ten seats contested only by Conservative and Liberal Democrat parties.

The pattern of competition in multimember seats shows that many parties are content with fielding fewer candidates than available vacancies. The shire districts using whole council elections provide an example. For two-member wards, whereas the Conservative party had two candidates on the ballot in 78% of cases, the Liberal Democrats contested both seats in 47% and Labour in just 38%. Of course, the remaining cases cover either uncontested wards (for Conservative, Labour and Liberal Democrats, 7%, 43% and 35% respectively) or wards where a solitary party candidate stood (15%, 18% and 17% respectively).

The same phenomenon is observed in three-member wards. While local Conservative parties fielded a full slate of candidates in 70% of such wards they had two candidates in 7% and one candidate in 11%. In almost one in five of the three-member wards Labour fielded just one candidate. Of course, this means that voters here must choose either to cast any remaining votes in favour of candidates from other parties or to use fewer votes than their entitlement. A similar trend is found in unitary councils with whole council elections but the number of three-member vacancies contested there by a single party representative is nearer one in ten for all three main parties.

Women comprise 31% of candidates, in line with recent trends. There is little difference in the frequency of women candidates across different types of local authority although the proportion of women standing in 'thirds' unitary authorities is as low as 27%. In 16 authorities the proportion of women candidates is 40% or higher. Most of these, 10, are in shire districts that elect by thirds and only three are from the remaining shire districts that use whole council elections. In two authorities, Barrow in Furness and Daventry women candidates are in the majority. At the other end of the spectrum there are 11 authorities where women candidates comprise 20% or fewer of all candidates. Again, the majority of these cases, seven, are located in shire districts using partial council election. The proportion of women candidates amongst the three main parties varies little, ranging between 30% for the Conservatives, 31% for Labour and 34% for the Liberal Democrats. The Green party tops the list - 40% of its candidates are women. Just over one in five candidates contesting as Independents or standing for smaller parties is a woman.

The percentage of women elected, 30.9% of the total number elected in 2007, is only slightly lower than the overall percentage of women standing. This suggests that women are not, contrary to some anecdotal evidence, selected for the least winnable seats, but rather, once selected, have as good a chance as men of being elected. This is a general pattern, moreover; the range in the percentage women elected across authorities is just three percentage points. Further confirmation of this can be found in the figures showing elected women as a percentage of all women contesting. For candidates as a whole some 37% were elected and for women only, some 36% were elected. In each set of local authorities these figures are comparable and further demonstrate that whatever the reasons for the under-representation of women in English local government any bias on the part of voters is not among them. The Green party's advantage in women candidates disappears when councillors elected are assessed. Less than one in three Green party councillors is a woman. The figures for the three main parties are 29%, 31% and 34% for Conservative, Labour and Liberal Democrats respectively.

The figures show that almost eight thousand candidates contesting in 2007 were incumbents seeking re-election. In other words, 74% of seats were contested by an incumbent. The highest proportion of would-be returnees is among the metropolitan boroughs. Here, more than eight in ten vacant seats saw an incumbent challenge. This is understandable since this particular cohort was elected as recently as 2004 when new ward boundaries were implemented. The lowest proportion of incumbents is found in the shire districts with whole council elections where the figure is ten percentage points lower. The longer electoral cycle is probably the main explanation for this difference.

Having decided to seek another four year term incumbents enjoy a high level of success since 82% of them were re-elected. The highest rate of re-election came in the metropolitan boroughs where 88% of incumbents were re-elected and the lowest in the unitary councils that elect a third of councillors but even here 79% of incumbents were successful. Inevitably, given the party's strong performance, Conservative party incumbents saw the most success with more than nine in ten re-elected, a figure almost matched by the Greens. Around three-quarters of Labour and Liberal Democrat incumbents were successful with a similar number of Independent achieving another success. Former Labour councillors in the shire districts suffered most. Here, just two-thirds of returning incumbents were successful.

The local elections in 2007 gave the opportunity to vote to some 30.7 million registered electors, over 80% of the total electorate in England. There were no elections in London, but outside the capital only about seven in every 100 electors lived in an area where no contests were scheduled. Across England around 11 million valid votes were cast, making the overall turnout 36.9%. That compares with 36.5% in 2006 and 35.6% in 2003 – the previous occasion on which most of the seats falling vacant this year were contested. Taking into account those who tried to vote but had their ballot papers or postal vote returns rejected, the level of participation rises to 38.3%.

Mayoral elections

Mayoral elections were held in three authorities simultaneously with the local council elections – in Bedford, Mansfield and Middlesbrough. The results are shown below. The mayoral election in Bedford was the subject of a pilot scheme whereby voters were presented with a single column rather than the usual two columns in which to cast their votes. Ballots were also counted electronically. Only one of the three elections, Middlesbrough, was decided following the count of first votes. In Mansfield the winning candidate received an absolute majority after first and second votes were combined but in Bedford the elected mayor received just 45.3% of votes.

Using the Handbook

In 2007 there were elections in England for a total of 312 local authorities comprising 36 metropolitan boroughs, 45 unitary authorities and 231 shire districts. There were also elections held for 32 Scottish councils. Additionally, there were three mayoral elections in Bedford, Mansfield, and Middlesbrough respectively.

The Handbook is organised into four sections, which cover the metropolitan, unitary, shire district and Scottish councils respectively. Within these categories councils are organised alphabetically. Results are reported in alphabetical order of ward name. Election results have generally been taken from figures provided by, and checked with, Electoral Administrators.

Before the ward results we have provided a section containing aggregate data covering each local authority. Results for each authority were aggregated to produce this set of summary statistics. These include the percentage vote share for a range of parties and independent candidates. Where more than one councillor is elected then the vote of the best placed candidate for each party is used in calculating total vote. In contests featuring multiple Independent candidates these were grouped according to the number of seats in a ward. In the case of a three-member seat with six Independent candidates, therefore, the votes of the first and fourth placed Independent contribute towards the total vote figure. The number of seats contested and the number of seats won by each party is also noted.

Turnout, in brackets after the name of the authority, is the average turnout in those divisions/wards which had a contested election. The Appendix contains details of local authority turnout that has been calculated using different methods. These methods will produce slightly different figures for those authorities that have a large range for electorates and where complex patterns of contestation result in an under- or over-estimate of actual votes cast. In the majority of cases the differences between the two methods are rather small. Also in the Appendix, Table A6 contains details of Scottish council electorates, turnout and rejected ballots for 2003 and 2007.

In those authorities where a direct comparison with either the 2003 or 2006 election is possible we have also provided the percentage change for the different parties. In some councils this has not proved practicable because of the nature of their electoral cycles.

The final two lines of the summary of aggregate statistics provide information relating to the number of candidates fielded by each party as well as the number of candidates successfully elected. Note, that since some councils are electing only a fraction of the council body that the 'seats won' category does not equate to the full council composition.

In the main body of the book the results for each ward are listed in alphabetical order within each local authority. The figure in brackets is the electorate for 2007. The practice adopted by local authorities for calculating this figure varies but the introduction of rolling electoral registers means that this figure is a good approximation of the numbers eligible to vote on election day. Nevertheless, it has been impossible to adopt a standard definition of electorate or reliably to identify the particular procedures used by each authority when compiling this figure.

The appearance of a date in [square brackets] after the electorate indicates that for some reason the election was not held on May 3 but was contested on the later, specified date – this year there were 16 such contests. Elections are normally postponed because of the death of one of the candidates and a subsequent election is held as early as possible. The first of these contests was held on May 24 with subsequent ones held on the 7th, 14th and 21st June. There are two instances, one in Ryedale, the other in Mid Devon, where the cause of a subsequent election was due to an insufficient number of candidates being nominated for a multi-member ward. This meant that by-elections were required to fill those vacant council seats. In these cases we have recorded the initial outcome in the body of ward results but include overleaf the result in the subsequent by-elections.

Candidates are listed in descending order of vote within each ward. The first initial is given; 'Ms.' after a candidate's name indicates a woman; and '*' indicates that the candidate was a sitting councillor, although not necessarily for the same ward. Vote is the number of electors who supported each candidate and Share the proportion of the total number who cast a valid ballot supporting each candidate. The process of rounding means that some shares do not necessarily sum to 100.

In the case of multi-member wards where more than one vacancy was filled we have used the vote of each party's best placed candidate in order to calculate total vote and hence party shares. Where a candidate(s) was returned unopposed then either '0' or '0.0' are used in the fields for vote, share and turnout.

Below the list of candidates is a further line of data. First, we print the name of the party whose candidate finished top of the poll at the previous election – note: the year varies according to the particular electoral cycle for that ward.

Next, is recorded the percentage turnout. Turnout is the proportion of the electorate that cast valid ballots at the election. In the overwhelming majority of cases in 2007 turnout is that given by the local Electoral Administrator and has thus been calculated knowing the number of valid ballot papers issued. In a relatively small number of cases we have ourselves calculated turnout from the available information but this year only for single member wards – turnout data for all multimember divisions/wards has been collected from Electoral Administrators. The figure to the right of the turnout represents the lead of the winning party over the second placed party in percentage terms rounded to one decimal place. The process of rounding means that in some cases the percentage majority may not be exactly the same as the winning party's vote share minus the second-placed party's share.

Candidates standing for local election use an extensive variety of party labels that now have to be officially registered with the Electoral Commission. These have been used throughout the Handbook, leading to a proliferation of party labels. These labels, and the abbreviations we have used, are described below.
